MR. It provides that when a Representative or delegate dies during his term of office, the actual funeral expenses, not to exceed $1,000, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House. Care also taken to provide that, in the future, committees of the House sent with the remains of a deceased Congressman shall not make it an occasion for a big jamboree, as has been done frequently heretofore. The friends from this town and vicinity began to come in about that time and by nine o'clock the house was filled with an animated throng. The Rev. J. D. Rigg, which I was paid $30 for without pastor of the Smyrna M. E. Church, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Haynes, in an appropriate speech, a box containing 105 bright new silver dollars, together with an autograph album containing respect and esteem of his many friends in Smyrna, which were accepted by Mr. Haynes in a feeling manner. This was followed by another resentation ceremony shortly after, Mr. Thomas G. DeFord, on behalf of the friends of Chestersilver tea waiter. Hoffecker introducing those of Smyrna and Thomas G. DeFord those of Chestertown. A season of free social intercourse and music followed, when the doors of the refreshment room were opened and an unusually rich table confronted the guests. A large pyramid of foreign fruits graced the centre of the CORN table, cakes, creams, jellies, ambrosia, coffee, &c., being in abundance, and dispensed to the guests by six young ladies of the Chestertown congregation. The providing of this rich repast was the generous contribution of ladies of this town. The company from Smyrna left the parsonage shortly after eleven o'clock and reached home at a quarter past one without accident, greatly pleased with the trip. Those from this town left the parsonage soon afterwards. Rev. W. S. Hammond, wife and daughter, of the M. P. Church, and others not members of the M. E. congregation, were present and entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable social events that has ever transpired in our town, and the delighted gathering separated feeling that they had spent an evening long to be remembered.
