EDITORIAL NOTES.

A Washington correspondent says: There has been, within the past week, open avowal of the determination on the part of certain influential Republicans to defeat Mr. Roosevelt in the National Republican Convention. This opposition is based on his alleged erraticism and the ground that he is not a "safe man." It is an ill wind which blows nobody good, however, and the same men who are opposing Mr. Roosevelt are contemplating the support of the Democratic ticket if a careful and conservative man should be the nominee. A prominent New Yorker who has been recently in Washington said, on this subject: "We do not want a man in the White House who is always looking for a sensation and who is willing to abandon even the things of his own invention as soon as they cease to be novel. The enforcement of laws which exist and the advocacy of more effective legislation to a desired end is not to be objected to in a President, but we do not want a President to whom the sensational appeals and who would do a thing in the wrong way rather than in the right in order to appear in the glare of the lime light." This is only a sample of the arguments advanced against Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy by that element of New York business men known as "conservatives," and it is heard so frequently as to occasion serious concern to the supporters of the President.

Scientists who have been in session in Washington recently have advised Secretary Hay that if the original Declaration of Independence is to be preserved it must be stored in a light and air proof safe and it has been removed from the glass case in the State Department, where it has rested for one hundred years. Many of the signatures are already illegible and the text of the instrument is rapidly fading away. This fading is said to be due to the poor quality of ink used and also to the fact that it was submitted to the process of letter copying some decades ago in order that the original signers might each possess a fac simile copy.

As President Roosevelt comes out of the woods of Yellowstone Park he is confronted with a demand that he immediately change front on the vexed race question. Says the New York American:

Since he secluded himself in the wilds discussion of it has been actively renewed. The occasion for this renewal was the address of ex-President Cleveland at the Booker Washington meeting in this city last week, in which he agreed unreservedly with the stand first taken by the American months ago, when Mr. Roosevelt, as a bidder for colored delegates to the next National Republican Convention, set the whole South aflame. It will not surprise the President to learn that the Southern press indorses Mr. Cleveland's speech with the same heartiness that it has indorsed the utterances of this journal on the same subject. But there is something else that will give concern to Mr. Roosevelt, because of its political significance. Not a few Northern newspapers, classified as Democratic, which were for a time disposed to support him in forcing negro officials upon hostile communities, have taken the back track. They were speedily made aware that the American, and not they, spoke for the Democratic sentiment of the nation, and that silenced them. The appearance of Mr. Cleveland on the American's side has emboldened them to fall into line. And more: On entering the Yellowstone the President already had it borne in upon him that many Northern Republicans regretted his attempt to resurrect sectionalism. When he comes out it will be to face the fact that the number of such Republicans has greatly increased. The intelligence of his party knows that he has made a mistake—and so does he.

Prof. I. L. Twilley, principal of the Annapolis High School, gives some interesting figures on the money value of an education. These are published elsewhere in this paper today. Prof. Twilley's deductions seem very fair indeed, and yet he touches only one factor in computing the worth of the accomplishments easily attained by children of ordinary intelligence, in ordinary circumstances—the financial value. In the language of a Southern educator, money expended for education is like the scriptural talents put at interest that return profit a hundred fold. It will come back to the State in every product of refined sentiment and cultivated intelligence, it will appear in every form of mechanical and industrial improvement; in more productive fields; in improved public highways and bridges; in more populous and embellished towns. The repetition and study of very important facts are helpful always, and the figures given by Prof. Twilley ought to appeal to the most practical parent negligent of his child's training or to the taxpayer skeptical on the benefits of the public school tax, wherever these may be found.

A Herald correspondent says Ex-Governor Jackson will re-enter politics and will look after legislative candidates, the inference being that the Ex-Governor has United States Senatorial aspirations.

In a case brought to test the disfranchisement of negroes in Alabama, the Supreme Court on Monday decided practically that the Federal Government has nothing to do with the matter.

It may be said that our country has a cosmopolitan climate as well as population. While the mercury was recently hovering about thirty hereabout it was ninety in Southern Florida.

THE BALTIMORE ELECTION.

The widest interest is manifested in the Baltimore city mayoralty election which will take place on the 7th inst. The candidates having been selected by vote of the people may be said to be the most popular available, and each side has put forth its very best efforts. The vote next Tuesday will without doubt be a very heavy one and the figures of the result will of course be scanned with greatest interest.

Early in the camgaign the independent press had brought to the proper compass the issues before the people, and upon these the verdict of the ballots will be reached. Against neither side would the charge of bossism stand, and the chief reliance of Republicans in many campaigns was swept away. The Sun said emphatically that "there is no foundation for the assertion that Mr. McLane owes his nomination to a boss." On the other hand the Democratic speakers have with some effect assailed the Republican organizers on that party's attitude on the problem which vexes many sections of the country—namely the question of the negro in politics. Mr. Wachter is in a delicate position at this point.

There are a hundred thousand negro voters in Baltimore—many of them are politicians—and it is becoming more and more, as the Democratic campaigners have shown, a gathering place of thousand of colored political refugees from the South of much more use to the Republican managers in Maryland than to the now impotent office-grabbing organizations of Dixie. The menace which the influx brings annoys the conservative Baltimore Republicans, as well as the Democrats, who know already of the dangers of this large floating political element, surcharged as it is with its own importance and its belief in its immunity. The conservative independent Republican citizen may speak with his ballot only next Tuesday.

In a recent speech Ex-Governor Brown said: "Maryland has become the chief dumping ground of this worthless class of colored people from the South—a class of people in whom we have no interest, either directly or indirectly, but who no sooner land within our borders than they become the competitors of the honest white labor of the State, and in very many cases become the subjects for our courts, prisons and asylums, and through their alliance with and allegiance to the Republican party enable that party to dominate the better class of white people of the State, thereby guaranteeing to this worthless, inferior class of colored people protection, and, by and through this protection, they are stimulated to become insolent, indolent and vicious, and the terror of any neighborhood they habituate."

This question has for several days occupied much of the time of the speakers.

THE GREATEST OF WORLD'S FAIRS.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition, which is to be by far the greatest of its kind in the history of the world—twice as large, it is estimated, as the World's Fair at Chicago of 1893—was dedicated at St. Louis Thursday in the presence of such an assemblage of the nation's leading men as is seldom gathered.

President Roosevelt, ex-President Grover Cleveland, members of the Cabinet, foreign representatives, Governors of States and Territories and tens of thousands of visitors from all walks of life were there. The weather was bitterly cold, with snow and rain, but the throng, though uncomfortable, was highly enthusiastic.

The two chief events of the day were a military parade, beginning at 10.30 a. m., in which 11,000 men took part, and the main dedication exercises at 2 p. m. in the Liberal Arts Building, on the fair grounds. At the exercises in the Liberal Arts Building Cardinal Gibbons delivered the invocation, President Roosevelt made the dedicatory address and ex-President Cleveland delivered the oration of the day.

Mr. Roosevelt drew a contrast between the type of expansion represented by the development of the Louisiana Purchase, out of which free, self-governing States were carved, and the subjugating expansion of Greece and Rome. He predicted that the United States is destined to play the part of the mightiest of the nations.

INDIANA FOR GORMAN.

Representative Griffith of Indiana says "Indiana has been a pretty strong Bryan State—far stronger than is generally supposed. However, there is not a Bryan man in Indiana who does not recognize that Bryan cannot win, and, therefore, there is the utmost desire to harmonize and concentrate our forces on some Democrat who can give the Republicans a race for their money. Senator Arthur P. Gorman, of Maryland, probably is the strongest man of any of those who have been mentioned. I am satisfied that there is more sentiment for the Marylander in Indiana than there is for Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, or any other man who is spoken of for the first place on the ticket. Gorman is a good all-around man. He has been tried and has shown his worth. It seems to me that the party ought to nominate some man who has had public experience, and Senator Gorman fills this bill."
