WHAT OF THE PROSPECT?

A Brief Survey of the Local Political Field. Now that the registrations have closed and the results fully summed up, and the lines between the two parties in Kent clearly drawn, we are justified in prognosticating results. The outlook is very favorable. Indeed the whole field was never more inviting or gave more cheering indications of a splendid Democratic victory. The gallant first district, which has always been a tower of strength to the Democracy, and has never failed to roll up a handsome majority is in splendid condition, and presents a solid front to the foe. She is not disposed to take a back step now when the stake is so great upon local and State issues. She will do her who duty without a doubt. In the second district there has been some jarring and discord with reference to a single local candidate, but it is hoped that this, if not already, will soon be entirely healed. No democrat of that district ought to allow a little personal feeling to interfere with the full performance of his known duty. Even if he can succeed in doing another harm it will be of no benefit to himself, but rather to his discredit, in that it discounts his party fealty and fair mindedness, and accrues only to the benefit of his enemies. The ticket as a whole in Kennedyville district will receive a hearty and earnest support, and a handsome ma jority will be rolled up for it in November.
