THE SCHOOL HOUSE AS A SIGN. -An exchange that takes a deep interest in educational matters says: "There is no surer sign of a lack of intelligence and refinement in a neighborhood than a dilapidated and slovenly school house, its benches have never before sold them so low hacked with knives and stained with ink, its floors covered with dirt, its windows open to storm and rain. On the other hand, if you see a school house of neat design, freshly painted, in good repair, with a small yard and surrounded with trees, you instinctively infer that the families in the neighborhood are enterprising and intelligent. If the school house is what it ought teacher, and well-behaved scholars. In such a neighborhood, moreover, you will find the farms well taken care of, the fences trim and the houses in good repair. The community which neglects its schools is on the high road to ruin."

THE COCOANUT AS AN ARTICLE OF FOOD. -It is claimed that the cocoanut is exceedingly valuable as an article of food, and among other illus- 230 W. PRATT ST., trations it is stated that a vessel from San Francisco for Sydney, with 400 passengers, running short of stores, put into Samsa, where a large quantity of cocoanuts were obtained. The rest of the passage was stormy, the vessel became water-logged, and was eighty days in reaching Sydney. The provisions ran short, and men, women and children were fed upon cocoanuts, being at last reduced to one per diem for each adult. Notwithstanding the diet, not a life was lost and not a single case of sickness occured, all the passengers landing in a healthy and well-
