The Major's Visit to Baltimore. Mesers. Editors : - We took passage on the swift propellor Enterprise from Chestertown to Baltimore, commanded by Capt. Jack Anthony. A more pleasant trip no one need want; we had on board the president of the company, Mr. J. C. Slaughter, and the ex-president, Mr. R. J. Foard, and his family, with some of the directors. We had not been long out when we were summoned to a supper of beefsteak and coffee, which none can prepare better than cook James; he is an expert in his profession. As we glided over the waters the moon looked down on us with much complacency, adding to our pleasure inleed. Soon we began to meet the beautiful steamers that were outward bound and as we passed we congratulated each other, showing that a spirit of good-will still broods over our scene that met our eyes was the beautiful city of monuments with electric lights giving enchant-ment to the scene. When we reached the pier at midnight the city seemed to be wrapped in slumber for there was hardly a person to be seen .-Resting for the coming day with its cares and anxieties our minds reverted to the immortal Key and the Star Spangled Banner-"O long may it wave, over the land of the free and the and begun to shed its mellowing light over the city I wended my way almost to its northern extremity, where I found my brother and his son, keeping house and nicely fixed. After talking over old times and referring to past friends, too many of whom have gone where the clods of the trust are free from all care. No sound can awake them to glory again in this world, but I hope they will rise to a blessed immortality. In one of my rambles I went to the city hall where I made the acquaintance of the Hon. Mayor, F. C. Latrobe, who is a gentleman of the first order. In our conversation I found that he was a class-mate of the late Col. Geo. Hanson, who though dead, is still alive in our memories for his noble traits of character and manly

MR. BLAINE CORRECTED.—Mr. J. Buchanan Henry, who was President Buchanan's private secretary, declares that there is not one word of truth in the statement in Mr. Blaine's book to and perilous to the integrity of the Union." Mr. Henry also says that "if the historical accuracy of Mr. Blaine's statements in the chapters yet to be given to the public is not more manifest than in the one just published, the forthcoming work will have to be classed with fiction rather than history, or consigned to the domain of campaign literature." Alluding to Mr. Blaine's approval of President Buchanan's "moral and social worth," Mr. Henry responds that "the latter's friends will cheerfully dispense with any tribute of this kind from the hero of the Mulligan episode.

BRAZILIAN AID TO THE LONGFELLOW MONUMENT. Traction Steam Engine. -The Brazilian Consul-General writes to the New York Times, that the men of letters in Brazil have gladly availed themselves of the opportunity to subscribe to the erection of a monument at Cambridge, Mass., in honor of the poet men of letters, poets, journalists, public officers and other representatives of the cultivation of Brazil. The Consul says, these desire to show their profound respect for an American poet, "whose poems are so well-known by the educa-shortly." ted portion of Brazilian society, who admired

Eggs as Currency .- A few days since Kinsey stepped into a grocery store on Talbot street and asked for "three eggs worth of 'lasses." "Where are the eggs?" asked the merchant, "Dey is 'roun home, sir-will bring 'em 'roun.' When the merchant had gone to the grocery-room one of the bystanders said: "Kinsey, I don't believe the eggs are yet laid. "Yes, dey is sir-dat is, two of 'em is, and de hen am now on de nes layin'. We have often heard persons speak of counting chickens before they are hatched, but this is the first time we ever heard of any one's selling eggs before they were laid .-St. Michael's Comet.

GENERAL GRANT now weighs 228 pounds, writes a New York correspondent to a Boston paper, and but for a few more gray hairs in his short beard there is nothing to indicate that he has grown older in the last five years. Since his recent fall, however, his habits of life are and more regular, and he has also parted with all

THE New York newspapers assert that the additional supply to their water facilities will cost that city from twenty-five to thirty millions of dollars. The dam is proposed to be located in Westchester county, 35 miles from the city. It will be 250 feet high, and form a reservoir of fifty-eight billion gallons capacity.
