A LITTLE VACATION TRIP.

CONEY ISLAND, LONG BRANCH. ASBURY PARK, OCEAN GROVE, Etc., Etc.

On Saturday, the 16th of August, we started on a pleasure trip. Rehobeth was the objective reached in the early afternoon. From Chestertown as far as Wyoming, Del., we had the agreeable company of our young friend, W. M. Slay, Monday, and the balance of our stay at Rehobeth was especially enjoyable for the pleas-ant social intercourse with so many of our brethren. In company with that association we brethren. In company with that association we fellow stepped up, handed each of us a little bilboarded the steamer "Breakwater" on Tuesday afternoon for New York. The officers of the steamer from Captain Jenney down were as clever more than could be supplied and quite a number were compelled to "bunk" on the sofas. The ocean trip was very pleasant—only two or three of the whole company being "sea-sick." New York was reached—the run being 143 miles just as the fort gun signalled sunrise.

the Rev. J. B. Jones, who happened select this date for an excursion for his health. He was bending beneath the weight of his recent severe affliction and our deepest sympathy responded to his pathetic story of grief and loss. His great concern was for his seven orphaned little ones, so sadly bereft of a mother's care. The trip to the city seemed to benefit him, and we trust his return was even more pleasant. In order to see the great city's approaches we left our sofa bunk at the earliest morning dawn and took a favorable position on the forward deck. We were then steaming through "the narrows" and soon entered the broad bay. A brilliant arc of electric lights far in the distance first attracted our attention. "What's that?" was the inquiry.

"The lights of Brooklyn Bridge," said Capt. Jenney, who stood by and pointed out the va-Governor's Island is now passed on the right and Bedloe's Island on the left—the base of the Bartholdi Statue clearly discernible on the latter. | parted Shoreward, upon the one side, Jersey City with its miles of docks and grain elevators bounds the vision, while upon the other Brooklyn lies di-rectly to the right, and in the front is the great metropolis—the city of twelve hundred thousand souls, sixteen miles in length and with an area steeples and towers, red blocks and white palaces stretching out far beyond the vision's utmost limit; ocean steamers and river craft gracefully plough the bay, while the East and North river piers are lined with a forest of mast and stack- all together completing the busy fore-
