---Early Methods of Measuring Time.

The story is that King Alfred had no better way of telling time than by burning twelve candles, each of which lasted two hours, and, when all twelve were gone, another day had passed. Long before the time of Alfred, and long before the time of Christ, the shadow of the sun told the hour of the day by means of a sundial. The old Chaldeans so placed a hollow hemisphere, with a bead in the centre, that the shadow of the bead told the hour of the day. Other kinds of dials were afterward made with a tablet of wood or straight piece of metal. On the tablets were marked the different hours. When the shadow came to the mark IX, it was nine o'clock in the morning. The dial was sometimes placed near the ground, or in towers FOR LADIES! or buildings. The old clock on the eastern end of Faneuil Hall, in Boston, was formerly a dial of this kind; and on some of the old churchtowers in England you may see them today. Aside from the kinds mentioned, the dials now in existence are intended more for ornament than for use. In the days when dials were used, each one contained a motto of some kind, like these ; "Time files like the shadow," or, "I tell no hours but those that are happy." But the dial could be used only in the day time, and even then, it was worthless when the sun was covered with clouds. In order to measure the hours of night as well as the hours of the day, the Greeks and Romans used the clepsydra, which means, "The water steals away." A large jar was filled with water, and a hole was made in the bottom through which the water could run. The glass in those days was not transparent. No one could see from the outside how much water had escaped. So there were made on the inside | The Newest, Prettiest, Coolest and most certain marks that told the hours as the water ran out; or else a stick with notches in the edge, was dipped into the water, and the depth of water dropped into another jar, in which a block of wood was floating, the block rising as the A Peculiarity of Country Girls. Among the excursionists sitting on the city hall steps yesterday noon to eat luncheon was a young fellow who had a wide-awake look and a girl in a pink dress, who insisted on holding his hand and lopping over on his shoulder. Two or three gentlemen observed the situation, and halted for a second look. Their smiles were noted by the young man, and he released himself and came over to them and said Gentlemen, let me explain. Did either you ever live in the country?" "No," they replied in chorus.

"Then you don't understand the country girl. She requires to be loved after a certain fashion. She wants a practical realization of the fact that you love her. I might tell her how much I adored her, beginning now and talking until dark, but she wouldn't realize it a tenth part as much as if I put my arm around her waist and let her head drop on my shoulder. The one is talk-the other cold facts. "Exactly-that's so," remarked the men.

When a city girl is in love she conceals the fact or tries to. The country lass is only too proud to give it away. You saw us squeezing H. ands. You've got to squeeze a country girl's hand about so often, or she'll imagine you have got mad about something. Exactly-that's so," observed his auditors You may have noticed that I fed her crackers, and she fed me cheese. It must have looked very silly to you, but that's another phase of country courtship. If you'd claw off, the girl would imagine that you felt above her. I tell ou gentlemen, I've been courting country girls or the last ten years, and I'm giving you a way, and this is it."

"Exactly—that's so," replied the gentlemen,

"Exactly—that's so," replied the gentlemen, "Exactly-that's so," replied the gentlemen, in chorus, and they lifted their hats to the girl and walked off .- Detroit Free Press.

more than one perplexed housekeeper, we copfrom an exchange : An attempt to catch rats by traps, or by poisoning them suddenly, will fail. Old rats know too much and can only be caught by kindness.

To destroy them give them a good meal every day. Do not put poison in the food, but simply prepare a dish for them daily, as a free lunch, composed of corn meal moistened with milk, composed of corn meal moistened with milk, into which an egg and a little salt (to season) has been beaten. They will soon try a little, and in a week or ten days they will expect it, and every rat on the place will partake of the treat. Give them plenty of it so as to induce all the rats in the neighborhood to join them. As soon as they have thrown off all suspicion, go to your druggist and get some phosphorus paste, or other rat poison, mix it with the food, and be sure you give them enough and a little to spare. sure you give them enough and a little to spare, so as to induce all to eat. They will either be killed or become so suspicious of all other food as to leave, and not a rat will remain.
