A Good Story of the Present Day. Within an Act of Being Hanged for the Crime of Another Man.

It was about twenty years ago, and I was then 15 years of age, said Charles Webster as he laid aside his pipe with a sort of sigh, that I had seen a man hanged for the crime of another man.

I had been brought up on a farm, but having received a legacy of £100 by the death of an uncle, had set out to see the world, calculating on to make it in a few years.
