In another column we give some views relative to the advisability of abolishing the oyster dredging. If the subject can be considered dispassionately by both the city and county interests great good will come of this discussion. But, probably the next move will be an "oyster interest meeting" in Baltimore and another bloodand-thunder speech from Bradley Johnson. In his view the proposed abolition is a heinous offence against the "innocent dredgers!" And he'll prove by eloquence if not by logic that it is better to allow the stealing to go on than not dredge at all!
