The general opinion in Kent is that it requires seven or eight degrees below zero to kill peaches. Delaware growers say that three degrees below zero will kill. The crop of 1881 was killed in this section by the severe cold on the last day of December, 1880; our office thermometer marked 2° below zero, and at many other points in the county it ranged from five to 11°; at Mr. C. F. Stam's dwelling-an elevated site -it stood at the lowest point; and the average in the county was put at seven below zero. Two days of intense cold followed, and shortly after the peach growers began to talk of the "black speck" and prophesy destruction. Knowing ones said the black speck meant nothing and predicted a coming plenty. The result is known-an almost total failure of the crop. Our thermometer last Sunday being within six degrees of the record of the famous cold spell above referred to, naturally causes questionings and uneasiness. Life Insurance. Life Insurance has had a boom in Chestertown recently. > THIEVES FOILED .- An attempt was made last Tuesday night to forcibly enter the store of Mr. John Loller on Cross street. Mr. Loller states that he was aroused about 2 o'clock-being asleep in an adjoining room-by a peculiar noise at his store door. He proposed to give the burglar a warm reception but before he could get out of the door adjoining the thieves heard him and ran. He saw that there were two persons but could not tell their color. He found the marks of their instruments on the door, and the bent bolt told of the serious character of their effort. He would like to have another visit with an equally good chance to empty a revolver.
