CHESTERTOWN - MAR. 30, 1889.

Pumping a President.

An old newspaper man was reminiscencing a bit the other night, and said some interesting things, as such a reminiscencer is apt to do. He said: My only experience with Abe Lincoln was just after his election to the Presidency. I was sent down to Springfield by the New York Tribune, with the mission to find out all I could of his Cabinet and policy. In those days a President-elect was not besieged as Harrison has been, and such a mission as mine was a streak of newspaper enterprise. I felt [illegible] importance tremendously, and being [illegible] and fresh, was immediately sized [illegible]r. Lincoln, as I can see now, though [illegible]e it then.

[illegible]ed me kindly in his office and [illegible] things about the paper and [illegible]t facing me, with legs crossed [illegible]is knees, rocked his body [illegible]wly forward and backward. [illegible]speaking of several slight [illegible]d:

[illegible]ng friend, what can I do [illegible]

[illegible]a note-book with much dis[illegible]a pencil and said:

[illegible]a, I would be obliged to you [illegible]e names of such members of [illegible]as you have decided upon, if [illegible]what policy you will pursue, if [illegible]e settled upon anything definite."

Lincoln gave me a look which filled [illegible] heart with pride, for I thought it was full of admiration and respect. It makes me groan when I think of it now.

He said: "I shall be glad to do anything I can to assist you."

"Have you settled upon your Cabinet and your policy?"

"Oh, yes," he replied. "My policy is all written out and is in that trunk over there, with an entire list of the Cabinet."

"I would like to have them," I said, "if you have no objections."

Again he gave me that look of admiration, and if there was any twinkle in his eye I did not catch it.

"Not the least in the world. You are welcome to the whole matter. Nothing would give me more pleasure than to let you have it. I would give it to you now, but the fact is I have lost the key to the trunk."

Mr. Lincoln went on feeling in his pockets, regretting the loss of the pesky key and condemning his own carelessness, and emphasizing his sorrow at the situation and his inability to accommodate me, and fairly talked me out of the office, leaving me at the threshold with a hearty handshake and a cordial invitation to come and see him again. I can imagine how he must have doubled up with laughter after he got the door closed and rejoined the other peo- who were in the office.

It took me several years, while I was growing a mustache, to come to a full appreciation of the performance, and then I determined that the way to freshen the Atlantic Ocean was to dip me in it.—Washington Post.

Feeding a Big City.

The business of producing and providing food for mankind furnishes a livelihood to the majority of the race. Generals in command of armies of 20,000 or 50,000 men have been brought to ignominious defeat and flight for the lack of power to supply them with food; and yet a population of two and one-half million people in and around New York are supplied with food every day and for every meal from all parts of the world. Ten thousand head of cattle are slaughtered every week to provide New York with beef, and that is not more than one-half of the beef consumed there. Some of the beef comes in on foot; the rest comes in refrigerator cars from the West. Swine are brought in dressed, but sheep are all killed in the city. The greater part of the fresh fish supply of the city comes in refrigerator cars from Boston and Gloucester; the rest comes to the markets in fishing boats. Enough fish is kept ahead in the cold storehouses to last the city two or three weeks. The vegetables come from almost anywhere. Lettuce is mainly brought from Boston, where one firm ships $100,000 worth each year. Enormous amounts of celery come from Kalamazoo, Mich. The South supplies the early vege-tables, and some of them come from Florida. [illegible]ey come in refrigerator cars, and because [illegible]y can be safely shipped and easily kept, [illegible]no longer command fabulous prices. [illegible]the bulk of the green vegetable bus- [illegible]still done in the old way by farm- [illegible]o come in from their places five [illegible]y and more miles away and sell [illegible]oduce from their wagons. Some of [illegible]art in the afternoon and drive all [illegible]ften sleeping on their wagons and [illegible]aking when their trained horses [illegible]rought them to the ferries at one [illegible]o o'clock at night. The Ganesvoort [illegible]et is the only place where they are [illegible]e city, and there it is sold to the dealers. [illegible]n summer time as many as three thousand wagons a day are driven in. The cattle on the thousand hills daily contribute the milk that New York consumes the next day. The farmer gets from one and one-half to two and one-half cents a quart for it and the consumer pays eight and ten. The defference is divided among the railroads, commission merchants and peddlers, the latter getting several cents a quart. One of the curious things of the provision business is that eggs laid in Holland and Germany get to New York in less time than from some Western States and are actually cheaper than fresh egg laid in this country, the reason being they are rated as "limed eggs."—Good Housekeeping.

Loved Features on Watch Dials.

"It is getting quite the thing, nowadays, for the dude clerks to carry their girls' pictures around with them engraved on their watch-cases," said a New York jeweler to a World reporter.

"The pictures are put on by an entirely new process. Formerly they were photographed on the watch dials. By the new process the picture is put on the inside case or cap of the watch. Instead of being photographed the portrait is burned in.

"By this process the picture presents a soft, pleasing effect, preserving all the delicacy of the original. This process has only been known a short time, and the young men in the offices around here have taken quite a fancy to it, so our business is growing.

"It is a common thing to see the youths pull out their watches, open the back of the case and peer into it for several minutes. The uninitiated might suppose they were examining the works of the watch; but, instead of that, they are gazing at the features of their 'best.'"

Cost of Making a Boy a Man.

"My father never did anything for me," recently remarked a young man who a few weeks ago finished his school life and is now seeking a good business opening. Judging by the words and the complaining tone in which they were uttered, the member of the firm who heard them is prone to the belief that the young man's idea of "doing something" is an outright gift of $1,000 in a lump, or the purchase of a partnership in an established concern.

The young man, to the knowledge of the writer, has not done one month's actual work for others in his entire life. His life has been passed in the pleasant pastimes of the home circle, in reading, hunting, fishing, ball playing, yachting and other employments not particularly beneficial to others. He is a type of that class of boys whose parents are sufficiently well to do to keep servants to attend to the household drudgery, and whose fathers follow vocations in which no use can be made of the boy's spare time. Like most boys of his class, he looks upon his board and clothes for twenty years, together with his pony, jewelry, bicycle, etc., as matters of course. The writer, while the complaining remark was still ringing in his ear, had the curiosity to make a conservative compilation of what it costs to raise an ordinary boy for the first twenty years of his life, and here it is: $100 per year for the first five years, $500; $150 per year for the second five years, $750; $200 per year for the third five years, $1,000; $300 per year for the next three years, $900; $500 for the next two years, $1,000. Total $4,150.

This is a moderate estimate of the financial balance against the boy who complains that his father has never done anything for him.

How to Visit the White House.

When the visitor goes to the White House, which he ought to do if he wants to see the President, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, he goes into the East Room, may be permitted, if the messengers in charge are at liberty to grant the permission in midday, to see the Green, Blue and Red Parlors and perhaps the conservatory, but not to go up stairs. If it is on Wednesday or Friday the President will appear at about 1 to 1.30 o'clock, and standing in the door leading to the inner corridor, will shake the hands of the waiting crowd as they are passed rapidly by him. Then he will be turned out by the side door and be expected to go his way. There are no tips to be given in the White House or elsewhere. The custom has not become established here. For many years it flourished in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, but it has been nipped there. A visitor who must be economical can find a comfortable room and bearable board for a week for $2 a day and see all the sights that he can reach in a day at an expense not necessarily exceeding 50 cents a day more. This is all very primary and "chestnutty" information to the person well acquainted with Washington, but it will be useful to the stranger.—New York Times.

Thieves in China.

Those people who are always lamenting the drawbacks of London should consider how much better off they must be than the dwellers in Peking. The currency there consists of lumps of silver as big as apples, and the carriers are often attacked in the open streets, and forced to buy protection at a high price from prize-fighters, who may be seen sitting on the shafts of the mule cart which conveys the silver. Pickpockets abound, and are bold enough to attack carriages and tear off the jeweled head-gear of the ladies within, the drivers meanwhile secretly pretending not to see the transaction and the wayfarers, like true Chinamen, firmly persuaded that to let well enough alone is their wisest course.

But the greatest proof of the ascendency of the population is the actual existence of a market where stolen goods are for sale every day. During the early morning hour devoted to this the place is crowded, and ludicrous incidents sometimes take place. A man once bought a roust duck, and on getting home found it was made of mud.—London Life.

Postmaster Wanamaker Talks.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore American states that Postmaster General Wanamaker made the following statement to him on Tuesday afternoon, after he returned from the meeting of the Cabinet, of the policy to be pursued by the Postoffice Department:

"It will be the policy of this administration to let postmasters serve out their terms unless good and sufficient reasons are given for their removal. The delegations that come here filing petitions for the appointment of other postmasters will not be considered, unless accompanied by some reason for the dismissal of the postmaster already in possession. This department appoints daily a large number of fourth-class postmasters, but in every case the appointment has been made by reason of a resignation tendered or because the incumbent was shown to be incompetent or inefficient. In all cases where inefficiency or incompetency cannot be shown, a postmaster will be allowed to serve out his term of four years. It would disarrange the whole machine to make these wholesale removals."

One Voice for Cleveland.

From the Boston Globe.

He is now Ex-President Cleveland.
He was an honest President.
He was a brave President.
He was a President who did his duty as he saw it, regardless of consequence to his party or himself.
He was a President who was four years ahead of his time.
He was the first President since the war who was President of the whole country, and realized that there were 38 equally loyal States in this Union.
"He was a man, take him for all in all, we shall not look upon his like again."
At least, not for four years.
