Reynolds Ash Is Appointed Trial Magistrate

At the request of Governor Herbert R. O'Conor Mr. G. Reynolds Ash, of the Cecil County Bar, has consented tp accept the appointment as trial magistrate at Elkton. Mr. Ash was not an aspirant to the position but the governor requested him to accept the appointment.

It is interesting to note that very recently when the governor was called upon to name a judge in Cecil County that many persons endorsed Mr. Ash for the appointment. Upon consulting with judges and attorneys of the circuit, he was told that Mr. Ash possessed most desirable qualifications and would be worthy of appointment to the higher court. The fact that he consented to serve under the new trial magistrate system is highly gratifying to the governor.

County Farm Agent

Japanese Beetle traps will be available to farmers in all section of Cecil County this year. In the trapping demonstrations just north of Elkton last year, it was found that traps were effective in catching large quantities of beetles. Over five hundred barrels of beetles were caught. A number of diggings have been made and the number of grubbs pr square feet counted, and it is indicated that there will be a heavy infestation in all sections of the county.

Traps will be made available in all sections of the county to farmers at a small cost. Sufficient funds were not available to purchase all of the traps needed, it has been found necessary to make a small rental charge in order to secure enough traps, to supply the farmers in all sections of the county.

Present plans contemplate a two year program, so that farmers who secure traps this year may have the use of them for at least two years, and it is quite possible that plans will be worked out to leave the traps on the farm longer than two years.

Lists of those desiring traps are now being made up. Farmers who wish to secure traps are urged to write or call at the County Agent's Office at their earliest convenience. It is expected that beetles will begin emerging about the middle of June.

CHES & DELAWARE CANAL CHANGES

Suggested Changes And Improvements In Operation

PHILADELPHIA, May 25 — The various hearings and studies given to the transportation system of the Eastern Shore after the collapse of the St. George's bridge when hit by a steamer has resulted in a profound conviction held by many persons that now is the proper time to expand the size of the canal, straighten and deepen it for greater traffic transfers and have all crossings possible remedied so that both water and land transportation be continuous and unobstructed.

The period since the canal was recently widened and deepened, was a priod of experimental operation and it was seen that the possible amount of water borne traffic was much underestimated and that larger and deeper laden steamers want the use of this convenience and economy.

The safe operation of vessels transiting the canal is jeoparded by the sharp bends, limited vision, and the bridges. Baltimore business men are emphasizing again the need for promptly making the canal operable during 24 hours of the day, and a speedier transit, but without use of tugs, and a need for 30 ft. of water depth, which was supported by Senators Radcliffe and Tydings of Maryland and the Maryland House of Delegates.

Steam ship operators are also in accord and in a number of instances have sent statements and letters in regard to the situation. The Atlantic Deep Water Ways Association is also actively interested in the development of the canal and its future usefulness.

Delaware is opposing the elimination of any of the bridges. Additional hearings will be held to further eliminate matters in dispute and arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

In recent months Mr. Smith has had opportunity to observe China under war conditions, and he has been i nactive work with refugees. He is able to tell what the war has done to Christian work and to China generally, and to give accurate information as to the probable outcome of the war and the task challenging the Christian Church when peace is restored.

Mr. Smith is a friend of many years standing of the rector of the parish, Dr. Albinson, and served with him as an Infantry officer during the World War. At the close of the war Mr. Smith completed his theological training and went as a missionary to China. He will be well worth hearing.

Rural Women's Short Course

Plans are rapidly nearing completion for the annual Rural Women's Short Course, which will be held at the University of Maryland on June 1217. This will be the seventeenth consecutive year that the Rural Women's Short Course has been held and it has become an outstanding event of the university year.

According to Miss Venia M. Kellar, Assistant Director, the special theme chosen for this year is "Wider Horizons." Those who have attended in former years have so frequently expressd the thought that the experience broadened their outlook on life and gave them a new vision of their opportunities that it was decided to definitely plan the program with that aim in view.

As in former years, there will be courses in the subjects directly associated with home making and care of the family. In addition, there will be the general assembly programs each forenoon and afternoon, at which all those attending will have an opportunity to hear speakers of national reputation present up-to-date information on the vital topics of the day. These programs assume unusual interest and importance because of the complex and unsettled conditions throughout the world.

Registration for Short Course is being conducted in the respective counties. Reports received by Miss Kellar indicates that large numbers of women representing all counties have already made plans to attend.

The goal for Cecil County is fifty. Those desiring to attend Short Course are requested to sign up with the Home Demonstration Agent before June 1. All members of Homemakers clubs as well as those particularly interested in Extension Activities are offered this opportunity to attend.

Safety

Look where one may for the "fly" in the highway "ointment" the sincere observer, we believe, will soon come back to the first place importance of attitude.

The driver's attitude toward other people, the laws, his social and moral obligations furnish the primary incentive for being the kind of driver who doesn't have accidents.

It's widely recognized that where the proper attitude is lacking, it can be artificially created by stringent laws and the pressure of public opinion . . . but we must have it.

We have said it before, and we will probably say it again, there are few if any places where in an equal length of time a complete character sketch may be secured of a person as there is when that person is driving a car.
