Poetical.

BETWEEN THE LIGHTS.

A little pause in life, while daylight lingers
Between the sunset and the pale moonrise,
When daily labor slips from weary fingers,
And soft gray shadows vail the schlaz eyes.

Old perfumes wander back from fields of clover
Seen in the light of suns that long have set,
Beloved ones, whose earthly toil is over,
Draw near, as if they lived among us yet.

Old voices call me, through the dusk removed,
I hear the echoes of departed feet:
And then I ask, with vain and troubled yearning,
What is the charm that makes old things so sweet?

Must the old joys be evermore witholden?
Even their memory keeps me pure and true;
And yet, from out Jerusalem the Golden
God speaketh, saying: "I make all things new."

"Father," I cry, "the old must still be nearer:
Stille my love, or give me back the past;
Give me the fair old earth, whose paths are dearer
Than all Thy shining streets, and mansions vast.

Peace, peace, the Lord of earth and Heaven knoweth
The human soul in all its heat and strife;
Out of His throne no stream of Lethe floweth,
But the clear river of eternal life.

He giveth life, are, life in all its sweetness;
Old loves, old sunny scenes, will He restore;
Only the curse of sin and incompleteness
Shall mar Thine earth and vex Thine heart no more.

Serve Him in daily work and earnest living,
And faith shall lift thee to His sunlit heights;
Then shall a psalm of gladness and thank giving
Fill the calm hour that comes between the lights.

The Public Buildings of Harford Co.

THE ALMSHOUSE.

By GEORGE W. ARCHER.

No. V.

On the 17th December, 1787, the General Assembly enacted that "Whereas the necessity, number and continual increase of the poor within the said counties [Montgomery and Harford] is very great and burthensome, &c., the Justices of said counties shall assess and levy at their next March courts, £300, and the like sum in 1789 and '90, to be by the collectors paid to [I give of course, only the names for Harford] Joseph Stiles, Daniel Treadaway, James Walker, William Smittison, Alexander Rigdon, Jesse Jarrett and Jacob Norris, who are appointed the Board of Trustees, with full power as a body politic, &c.," vacancies, if they occur, are "to be filled by the rest of the board from the principal inhabitants." All persons are required to accept the position of trustee "under a penalty of £10 for every refusal, except Assemblymen, clergymen, attorneys and practicing physicians and no Judge, magistrate, sheriff, or Assemblyman shall be chosen a member of the board."

The trustees are to "purchase not more than fifty acres, erect good buildings, one to be called the almshouse, for lodging the poor, the other, the work-house, for all such vagrants, &c., as shall be committed." They are also to buy beds, furniture, &c. After three years the Justices are to "levy three shillings, nine pence [50 cents] on every £100, for the support of the institution." The board are required to meet in January, May, August and November. At each November meeting an overseer is to be chosen for one year, and is to be paid not more than £70. Each inmate is required to "wear a badge upon the shoulder of the right sleeve, cut in red or blue cloth, containing P. M. or P. H. as the case may require; and for refusing, he may be punished with fifteen lashes and kept at hard labor." The law of 1768 for the Relief of the Poor of five counties named, required that a large letter P. shall be borne on the right sleeve, and further, along with the first letter of the county." This shows that the P. H. in the present case meant, Poor of Harford, and not Poor House, as one would naturally suppose. The P. M. (which in this connection looks very much like a Poor Man's brand) meant the Poor of Montgomery.

"To prevent the office of trustee from being burthensome," one was to be chosen every year. The board was also required to "rent suitable rooms for inmates until the buildings are completed." Meanwhile the Justices were to levy sufficient sums to pay the expenses of keeping the poor. It would be interesting to know where these "suitable rooms" were obtained, which the poor must have occupied for several years. It is to be observed that the former almshouse must either have been prematurely disposed of, or burnt, or rendered in some way uninhabitable, otherwise it could have been occupied by the paupers until the projected building was ready to receive them.

On the 11th November, 1789, the trustees of the poor, in accordance with this act, bought of Aquila Scott, for £200 current money, a tract "beginning at the southeast corner of lot No. 28 in Bel Air" (
