TWINS, 80, SPEND THEIR BIRTHDAY IN SICK-ROOM, ONE SERIOUSLY ILL.

Eighty years ago twins—a boy and girl, subsequently christened John and Rachel—were born in Butler, this county, to Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Tracey, descendents of a afamily of pioneers of Maryland.

One day this week the sister, Mrs. Rachel E. Pitts, watched out her eightieth birthday at the sick bed of her twin brother, John Thomas Tracey, who has been seriously ill for several weeks at his home, 512 East Twenty-sixth street, Baltimore city.

Mr. Tracey, a veteran of the Civil War, ran away from home while still a young boy to join the army. His father, at that time proprietor of the Bull's Head, a hotel for farmers in Baltimore, succeeded in getting the boy's release because of his youth. But John ran away again, and this time remained until the close of the war. His father died soon after the boy ran away the second time.

On several occasion Mr. Tracey was captured, but was released later at the order of Southern officers, who bade him "scoot, we don't want such a youngster on our hands."

Mrs. Pitts, who has lived all her life in Maryland, has been in Baltimore for the last sisx years.

"But I love the country," she said. "I can't understand why people will live all huddled up together in the city like sheep when there are great stretches of land all around unoccupied."

Mr. Tracey, who suffered an infection in his leg some time ago, was forced to have his leg amputated below the knee. Three days ago his wife was buried.

M. A. WOODS AND A. W. FUSS MADE DEFENDANTS IN SUIT FILED AT COUNTY SEAT.

William Numsen & Sons, Incorporated, filed a bill in the Circuit Court at Towson against M. A. Woods and A. W. Fuss in which the court is asked to require the defendants to account for 17 acres of sugar corn and to enjoin them from disposing of 3 acres of corn now standing upon their premises.

The bill states that on April 5, 1924, an agreement was entered into between the plaintiff and M. A. Woods, whereby the latter agreed to seed, cultivate, harvest and deliver to the former 20 acres of sugar corn during the season of 1924, and the price of $15 per ton delivered; that some time later Woods conveyed his farm to the defendant Fuss, who had full knowledge of the agreement with the plaintiff, and that when the corn crop matured the defendants disposed of about 17 acres to persons other than the plaintiff at prices greatly in excess of the contract price agreed upon. The plaintiff's place of business is at Asbestos, and the defendant's farm is in the Fourth district.

THE MOTORISTS' LITANY.

In a bulletin issued recently by the Automobile Club of Maryland there appeared "The Motorists' Alphabetical Litany," written by R. J. Leupold. The author is familiar with all the pests to be found on the road, and from whom we all devoutly wish to be delivered. It is a very original production and well worth preserving. We give it herewith in full:

"The Motorists' Alphabetical Litany"

From the Ass who passes suddenly from the rear without signaling.
From the Boob who suddenly stops without holding out his hand,
From the Clown who cracks jokes over his shoulder instead of watching the road,
From the Dummy who leaves rocks on the road after he has changed a tire,
From the Educator who tells everybody how to drive,
From the Flapper who powders her nose while cruising down a busy street,
From the Grouch who criticizes the Traffic Cops and every one else.
From the Hog who monopolizes the center of the highway,
From the Idiot who loafs along and deliberately speeds up when you try to pass him,
From the Jay Walker who darts out from behind a car in the middle of the block,
From the Knocker who finds fault with everybody and everything.
From the Louse with glaring headlights who does not turn them down when approaching another car,
Frm the Moron who drives with one hand and hugs his girl with the other,
From the Nincompoop who packs five people into his little roadster,
From the Oilcan whose car always leaves a pool of oil behind it,
From the Prohibition enforcement Crooks and Blackmailers and Bootleggers who infest the highways.
From the Quering Touring who holds up all traffic whilst he tells the Cop his life history,
From the Rummy who is always half tanked and zigzags down the road.
From the Saphead who cuts in front of you at a corner,
From the Traffic Cop who bawls you out for a mistake of his own,
From the Uplifter who wants to prevent spooning in cars,
From the Vamp who flirts with every male driver to the danger of everyone else,
From the Watermelon Vendor who parks his car on a busy thoroughfare,
From Xerotes of our gasoline tank ten miles from a filling station.
From the Yap who suddenly backs out of an alley,
From the Zany who stops in the middle of the street for a long talk with his pedestrian friend,
