THE EASTON STAR

TUESDAY, MAY 24, 1881.

T. K. ROBSON, Editor.

MRS. PRESIDENT GARFIELD, who has been very ill, is improving.

The Senate of the United States adjourned sine die last Friday.

COL. THOMAS A. SCOTT, late president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is dead.

THE colored Republican brethren of Baltimore are now pressing their claims on Mr. Postmaster Adreon.

THE Democrats are well pleased at the political results of the late extra session of the United States Senate.

THE Senate has rejected the nomination of William E. Chandler, of New Hampshire, for Solicitor General.

THE President has appointed Dr. Geo. B. Loring, of Massachusetts, Commissioner of Agriculture, and given the great LeDuc leave to retire to private life.

THE Democratic State Committee meets in Baltimore next Thursday, to fix upon the time for holding the State convention, to nominate a candidate for Comptroller.

A FREIGHT train on the Delaware Railroad collided with the passenger train of the Dorchester & Delaware road at Seaford on Wednesday, dmolishing the tender of the D. & D. road engine. No one hurt.

THE President exhibited not a little weakness, in re-appointing Conkling's New York friends, after his resignation and open declaration of war on the administration. It indicates that Garfield is still afraid of Conkling.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN and John Flood, two noted pugilists, had a prize fight near Yorkers, New York, on Tuesday. Sullivan was the victor in 16 minutes. On the 8th round Sullivan knocked Flood out of time by a tremendous blow on his jaw. Sullivan will now be matched to fight Pat Ryan

THE Democratic primary elections in Balthnore city took place on Thursday, to elect a city convention to manage the affairs of the party for the next year. The Bombshellers did not carry a single ward in the city, in only two or three did they attempt to run an opposition ticket. The Democratic party in the city is all O. K., as it doubtless will be throughout the tate, should an attempt be made to disrupt it. The pseudo reformers will find Jordan a hard road to travel if they attempt to overthrow the democratic organization of this State.

AT the municipal election at Cumberland, Md., held on the 16th inst., for city clerk and members of the city council, the Democrats swept the city, reversing the vote of last year by 151 majority for Col. Horace Resley, Dem., for clerk, over John W. Shaffer, Rep. The majority of the city council also democratic. The Democrats of Cumberland, who for a long time have been disorganized by divisions in the party, taking warning from the late bombshells, have determined that this is no time for the Democratic party to disintegrate In union there is strength.

A Warning to our County Commissioners.

The case of Mr. Jacob C. Wilson against the County Commissioners of Caroline county, removed from Caroline and tried in the Circuit Court for Talbot county last week, in which Mr. Wilson recovered a verdict for $1,000 damages, was one of more than ordinary public interest, and is full of warning to the commissioners of all the counties in the State.

It appears from the evidence in the case, that there is a bridge over the Choptank river 152 feet long, on the road between Goldsborough and Sand town, in Caroline county; that said bridge is about 9 years old; that it was built of best white oak timber; that said bridge was built by Caroline county and is kept up by said county; that the timbers in the said bridge had not been inspected since it was built; that on the 28th of September last Jacob C. Wilson, of Delaware, with a double team of valuable horses, and his mother and his two children in the carriage with him, attempted to pass over on said bridge with his horses in a walk; that one of the sleepers being rotten, the bridge broke down with him, and he and his family and horses and carriage all fell into the river; that the carriage was broken and his horses very badly injured, and his family bruised and thrown into the water, and all had to return to Dr. Hardcastle's, from whence they started, and secure other means than his own carriage to get home; that Wilson sued Caroline county for damages. The injuries were proved. The court instructed the jury in substance, at the instance of the plaintiff, that if the plaintiff suffered the injuries complained of in his declaration while atttempting to cross the bridge, exercising ordinary care, by reason of the defective condition of the timbers resulting from the negligence of the defendents in not keeping the bridge in proper repair, then the defendents were liable to the plaintiff in the action; that the jury must not only allow him actual damages, but such further damages as in the opinion of the jury he was equitably entitled to, to compensate him for all expenses he had incurred by reason of the accident.

On the other hand, at the suggestion of the counsel for the defendants, the court instructed the jury, that the defendents are only bound to use reasonable care in the keeping and repair of the bridge, and that if the defendents did use and exercise ordinary care in keeping said bridge in proper repair, then the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; or if there was a latent defect in the bridge sleeper that broke which the defendents by the exercise of reasonable care could not have discovered, then the plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

The strong point in the defence was that there was a latent defect in the particular timber that broke at the time the bridge was built; that it was doted at the heart, and the defect was not discovered by the contractor nor the commissioners; and that the accident was unavoidable, and by no fault or negligence of the commissioners. The balance of the timbers of the bridge are still sound and good. The verdict shows that a Talbot jury will not tolerate rotten bridges, notwithstanding they may result from latent defects in the timbers. It would be well for our county commissioners to be warned by this verdict. It appears to be their business to have all bridges thoroughly inspected at least once a year: and to do this the law provides that they may employ a competent civil engineer. If they fail to do so, and injury follows to any citizen, the county would be liable in damages. Care in this respect would rebut the charge of negligence, and might save the county heavy expense. And the cost of the inspection must not prevent the county commissioners from having it done. If the law requires it, to save life, limb, or property, it must be done, regardless of cost.

If the commissioners of Caroline had had the sleepers of the bridge inspected at the time they had the new floor laid in 1879, the "latent defect" defence would have availed to protect the county; at all events, it would have removed the case down to actual damages, which were proven to be only about $375; but the neglect to have the timbers inspected mulcted the county into $1,000 damages. The case was ably argued on both sides, and a flood of light thrown upon the bridge law which the county authorities should not close their eyes against. Are there no bridges in Talbot county that need inspection? We hope all are good and sound, but it might be unfortunate for the county if any of them proved to be otherwise, and there should happen such a disaster as occurred on that Caroline bridge last September, without their having been regularly inspected to provide against accident and to rebut the charge of official apathy to the loss of life or property.

A Double Bombshell.

Finding they could not defeat the confirmation of Judge Robertson as collector of the port of New York, Senators Conkling and Platt, of that State, on Monday week, both resigned their seats in the United States Senate, and sent to the Governor of New York a double bombshell, intended to demolish Mr. Garfield. The bombshell was a great surprise at Albany, and created dismay in the stalwart ranks. On Wednesday the appointment of Judge Robertson was confirmed, and when the news, a few minutes afterwards, reached Albany, the N. Y. Senate took a five minutes recess in order to have a big hurrah.

Conkling and Platt doubtless expected their bombshell to straighten things out in New York, and that their course would be endorsed by the legislature by their prompt re-election. But unfortunately for them, bombshells shot off at ones own party are as unpopular in New York as they are in Maryland, and instead of being re-elected, the action of the naughty Senators is generally condemned. The present indications are that they will not be re-elected, certainly not as Republicans. Many towns in New York have fired 100 guns over Conkling's defeat, without stopping to think that every such gun fired is a nail in the Republican coffin.

Lord Roscoe's Dead.

"Under which king, Bezonian
Speak or die.

If there were ever an occasion when these prophetic words of ancient Pistol found fitting illustration the occasion has come at last. For is not old Harry down, and young Harry in his stead withal—how let the mammoth be not as yet which king doth rule the roast! And as we are endeavoring to fully elucidate the text we refer for full illustration of the mooted trouble about the rendering of "Bezonian," to the person and the function of Senator Mahone. But tho' the honorable Senator shall serve to round out our text, our discourse is upon a larger theme and with a more exalted personage.

Lord Roscoe, then, is dead And in the august epic which he spake before his departure, had he not high civic and ecclesiastic precedent! Did not the great Charles and Diocletian alike seek philosophic seclusion under kindred memorial pomp! And did not the great political cardinal all "broken with the cares of State," consecrate the usage by his venerable example! Why what would sweeten History had it not the melancholy glow of these august sacrifices. In the felicitious contemplation our feelings run so far before us that we instinctively venture a hymn for the democratic party, at once calm, benitting and resigned:

"Then art gone to the grave
But we will not deplore thee."

And we desire some brother to raise the tune, even although the republican party claim that it is their funeral. For does not the great Master, from whom we select our text, proclaim our right as mourners,

"To be contracted in one brow with woe,
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
With an auspicious and a dropping eye."

And we have a larger right to be present on this sad occasion—the right of memory, the right to gather salutary lessons! And by that same token do we intend to remember many things. For what doth a great man's departure signify, beyond your's or ours, outside of its example! O yes! we remember many things. We call to mind how that for twelve long, dreary years every act of executive license has had this man's furtherance and counsel. That every harsh act against a prostrate people has had his bitterer comment. That every attempt upon the part of the South to depreciate and disprove all the miserable outrutus against her has met this man's cruel and relentless disdain! O yes, we will remember him. We remember that when Grant in effect abrogated the very nature of our government, and sent a rude soldier to shut up the halls of Legislatures, that this man was his endorser and defender. We remember him as the brains of these heroic coups d'état. And we remember that he came at last to project himself upon our very scheme of government like the sages of old did upon nature.

And now, when within his own party remonstrance ripens into protest and protest into defiance, shall we learn no lesson here? When so grave an organ as the New York Times says he overthrew himself "in a petty struggle for patronage and place," shall we not score a memorial point? Verily, verily. And when he himself records that the President dickered confidentially about bargain and sale—and then he "squeals" upon the President; shall we point no moral and adorn no tale? When further he is accused of driving his Senatorial compeers, and his legislative henchmen, like the soldiers of Xerxes were driven into battle, with the whip, we needs must meditate, and enlarge the calendar of our memory.

But here we are brought to pause. How if like doughty Falstaff's, the death be "counterfeit"? How if, to use the paraphrase of Pat upon the last words of Webster, he "ain't dead yit!" We know the British Empire feared the great Napoleon dead. We warn the Administration leaders to see him well "laid" or else himself will haunt their "caucus." (For do not the savory legends say how that in the flesh he bargained with his caucus that his own nominations were to be passed upon: the President's ignored?)

But whatever shape he take we reck not of his coming. Already has "even-handed justice commended the ingredients of his poisoned chalice to his own lips"—and, in this final sense, it is none of our funeral.

The "stalwarts" and the "half-breeds" must see to the final obsequies; for

"Whether he kill Cassio or Cassio him;
Every way makes our gain."

[COMMUNICATED.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE EASTON STAR:

As a plain unsophisticated democrat, I would like to have some questions answered which are pertinent to the present position of the Democratic party in Maryland. It will be remembered that in the campaign of 1875, nearly all the campaign documents used by the Republicans in that canvass were emanations from the Hagerstown Mail, Mr. Hamilton's organ in Washington County. Appearances indicate that the same sort of warfare is to be renewed in the coming campaign. Can you inform us by what right Mr. Hamilton claimed at that time the prerogative of vilifying and abusing the Democratic party because a majority of the Convention did not choose to nominate him for Governor? When in 1879 the Democratic party did nominate and elect Mr. Hamilton to the office of Governor, was it intended to elect a Governor to transact the business of the gubernatorial office, or did the party then intend to elect a Dictator? What right had Mr. Hamilton if he was not elected a Dictator, to deny the majority of the Democratic members of the Legislature the right to vote according to their own judgment in regard to questions in which the welfare of the State is involved?

Mr. Hamilton's organ, the Mail, is arraigning the last Legislature because it refused to follow absolutely the dictations of the Governor, and in plain language assumes that in electing Mr. Hamilton Governor the Democratic party surrendered all the convictions of its individual members in questions of State policy.

The people would like to be satisfied on this question, and if it is true as assumed that a Dictator has been chosen, what more will be necessary out for him to select the candidates for the next Legislature; and if elected, will the political millenium in the State have come?
