ADDITIONAL LOCAL ITEMS

Improvements.—The work of tearing out the old front and lower floor of the "Palace Grocery," John Chambers, proprietor, has been completed, preparatory to the introduction of a modern glass front. The latter is under contract for completion during next week.

Private School.—Attention is called to the advertisement of Prof. Buckey elsewhere. As the instruction is conducted entirely by Mr. Buckey personally, this would seem to be an unusually fine opportunity for parents to secure for their children very superior advantages Theatrical.—The Frostburg Dramatic Company will produce "The Two Orphans" in Ravenscraft's Opera House Tuesday evening, May 24. The company has gone to immense labor and expense to reproduce this great drama, and it is hoped the people will appreciate their efforts by giving them an overflowing house.

Finishing an Examination.—The principal of our school has about finished looking over the recent examination papers. He says that with the exception of two rooms the results were very unsatisfactory. In some rooms not a single pupil was found prepared for promotion. The work in arithmetic especially seemed to be very poorly done.

Death of a Prominent Citizen.—George L. Layman, ex-Sheriff of this county, and proprietor of the Tremont House, Cumberland, died Friday evening of last week, aged 56 years. He was well known and popular throughout Allegany and Garrett counties His wife and thirteen children survive. The interment took place near his former residence, Half-Way House, in Garrett county, and was largely attended.

Publications.—Again a welcome visitor has arrived, and, as usual, with new ideas. In fact, one will always find something new in Demorest's Monthly. In the May number is commenced a new department, "Sanitarian." It is to teach women how to keep healthy; and as Demorest always does things well, this department will be found a great boon to mothers and daughters. The serial, "Allan Quartermain" (by the author of "She") increases in interest, and the publisher is to be congratulated upon securing such a great addition as H. Rider Haggard to the already fine list of contributors. We find also that another great improvement has been made, by which a purchaser or subscriber is entitled to the selection of a pattern from the present or previous numbers of the magazine. In the Prohibition Department "Prohibition in Great Britain" shows what is being done on the "other side" in that line. Ladies, if you want a progressive magazine, see Demorest's. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. Clubbed with the JOURNAL for $3.10 cash, or 40 cents cheaper than the two taken separately.

History, biography, natural scenery, story song and poem, make up the May number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, this favorite family periodical, which is sure to give pleasure wherever it is read. There is a due admixture of grave and gay in the number, and the editor shows much skill in keeping track with the season of the year. Among the more important articles of this number is one on "The Death of Amy Robsart," which advocates a new view of this old question, and is practically a defense of Sir Walter Scott's novel, "Kenilworth." Another article which will attract attention is "Edward Irving and the Catholic Apostolic Church," which is accompanied by a portrait of Mr. Irving. "The Home of the Noted Indian Chief, Cornplanter," and "The Yosemite Valley," both largely illustrated, afford some views of our own country in widely distant sections. Miss Matthews' story, "His Banner Over Me," and Miss Linskill's "In Exchange for a Soul," are both continued and increase in interest. Besides these contributions, there are many short and interesting articles, some good poems and several very beautiful full page engravings, all helping to the end of making the magazine a welcome visitor everywhere.

The Synopsis of Phrenology, and Chart describing the Phrenological Developments, a pamphlet of 32 pages, contains the first principles of Phrenology together with directions for estimating the size of the faculties, descriptions of the temperaments, and their influence in human character, name and functions of the organs, showing their degree of power in a scale of seven; illustrated by upwards of 20 portraits and other engravings. This will afford the reader a very good idea of the outlines of Phrenology, teaching him how to read character by its use. Every one is interested in character-reading and should send ten cents in stamps for this to the publishers, Fowler and Wells Co., 775 Broadway, New York.

The May number of Our Little Ones is at hand. The frontispiece, "The Song of the Spring Rain," is a very pretty engraving. "Chippy Top-Knot" tells of the adventures of a very unduteful little chicken in a manner that will delight the small folks. "A Little Winged Jewel" and "The Great Dragon-Fly" will interest the older ones, as they tell of the life and habits of the humming-bird and dragon-fly. There are many other articles and illustrations. Address Russell Pub. Co., 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.
