BY SALLIE CARLTON. Should the sorrows of life, Overshadow thy way, Like the twilight succeeding The beauties of day, Forget not, there's One, Who is watching o'er thee

To brighten thy sorrow,

What'ere it may be. May thy future on earth Be more bright than the past, May the "Light of the world," Every sorrow o'ercast; When thy mission's fulfilled, And the earth-ties are riven, Mayst thou, then share the bliss Of the saved ones in Heaven. Philadelphia, May 25th, 1877.
