The Obligation of Service

By J. H. Clendaniel, Jr., Overland & Willys Knight Dealer

Remember the past war, motor car is no longer a pleasure car. It is my belief that both of these terms are obsolete. The present day understanding of the situation causes all classes of motor vehicles to be termed, AUTOMOBILE TRANSFORMATION. The transformation by automobile is equally, if not more important, than any other convenience.

Therefore, this resolves itself in to a SERVICE PROBLEM. The owner of a motor car must insist on reliable SERVICE and to protect himself he should buy a standard car of a reliable, and responsible dealer who is well established. He must know that the seller of the car carries in stock repair parts sufficient to render proper SERVICE when needed.

The dealer's obligation is to the buyer always; the manufacturer of the automobile is too far away to be of any assistance in time of need. Strictly speaking the purchase of an automobile, no matter what its make or price is purely an investment. Therefore, the owner should guard against loss or protect this investment by investigating the dealer's standing before he places an order, or the most important question, "What service will you render after I buy."

The dealer has an obligation to his customer but this doesn't necessarily mean giving service either entirely free or at a loss.
