Give the Boys Tools. A correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph, writing from Concord, Massachusetts, gives the following sensible advice to farmers: Few farmers' boy are so stupid as not to be greatly delighted at owning a few tools. It is a grevious mistake to deny a smart boy, who has any taste for corpenters' tools the opportunity to "tinker" with them. Better that he should waste a few feet of boards and pounds of nails, than not to acquire a handy knack of making the thousand and one little conveniences, which if not provided by the home folks, are pretiy sure not to be found at the

A farmer has during the year a good deal of broken time, such as stormy days and odd times, which may all be improved to the very advantage, if he has some little skill with tools. So I think it the part of wisdom and true economy to accustom the boys quite early to venture beyond the universal jack-knife, and become familiar with the use of handsaw and a full set of bits for boring, and chisels and the jackmake a good hand-sled to draw turnips to the barn and supplies make chicken-coops and milking stools.
