Kent Train Strikes Preston Crowding's Truck

Preston Crowding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Crowding, of Worton, was injured Thursday morning from being in collision with the Kent train while crossing the track in a truck.

Mr. Crowding was going after a load of pigs, and, previous to getting the pigs, drove to B. F. Rash's stack yard for straw. In going to the back field he had to cross the railroad tracks. Engineer Reed saw the man and realized a collision was inevitable and put on brakes, stopping a short distance from where he struck the truck. The machine was wrecked but Mr. Crowding made a lucky escape. He was carried to his home near by and Drs. Hines and Simpers notified. They found two teeth broken, lacerations of the face and a strained back.

While the Railroad Campany did not assume any responsibility for the accident a representative of the Company paid $800 for loss of truck. The escape of Mr. Crowding seems like a miracle when the truck is seen. It is literally destroyed.

P. S. C. CAN'T BAR TWO BOAT LINES

The Public Service Commission is powerless to prevent independent steamboat owners from competing with organized and established waterlines, Chairman Ezra B. Whitman said last Saturday night.

The Commission on Saturday authorized the Brighton Beach-Bay Shore Steamboat Company, which runs the General Lincoln, to operate between Pier 2 Light street and Rock Hall, Chestertown and points on the Chester river. It also authorized the operation of the Victor Lynn Transportation Company between Baltimore and Salisbury.

The former company competes with the Baltimore and Eastern Shore Ferry and two other steamboat concerns. The latter competes with the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company's Wicomico river line.
