BACK TO SCHOOL

Kent County boys and girls went back to school on Monday morning. Some had been waiting the opening day impatiently and others with great regret. Some youngsters welcome the return to work, others face it with despair because it means the end of happy, care-free days of vacation, when responsibilities were few.

It is not unnatural for a child to dislike the return to school. It is quite as natural as it is for the father to dislike his "daily grind," or the mother her daily routine of house work.

To the child, school is equally as heavy a responsibility as any adult shoulders. There is the requirement to be punctual and the need for having lessons that keep children on the alert all during the school year.

This is true, even though school routine is not as monotinous as it once was. It has been the constant effort of school executives to take from school as much of the dullness as possible and to make it interesting and appealing to imaginative minds.

Consider, for example, the much greater variety of courses that are taught and the different teaching methods used. A good bit of the instruction in the modern school deals with health. Every day the teacher is endeavoring to inculcate health habits in her children.

She is urging them by demonstration and by instruction, to brush their teeth regularly, to wash their hands, before they eat, to bathe frequently, to drink plenty of water, to eat the right food and, in general, to practice personal hygiene.

Who's to say that this is not an improvement over the day when a child's health was the last consideration and when just readin,' writin' and 'rithmetic were the only things regarded as really essential.

Of course, the new ways will not be as fruitful of results as they might be without home cooperation. This is needed to put to practical use the sensible hygiene children are taught in school.

Being a close follower of football myself, and knowing that at least one of my readers is also, (for he said so) and with column material scarce, I beg to bore you this week with a brief outline of the changes in the rules for 1927, with possibly a short comment upon each change.

The American game of football is still in a state of experimentation. Remember that. It has been demonstrated in the past that nothing can be told as to the effects of rule changes until they have been tried out in actual games. You can plan your battles before hand and thru sham battles but when it is all over you merely have a bunch of theories, the same that you started with. Remember the forward pass and the opposition it received from the old timers. Give the present changes a chance before you condemn them.

Here are the outstanding changes for 1927 summarized briefly:

1—The goal posts have been placed back ten yards to the back line of the end zone.

2—A time limit of thirty seconds has been placed on bringing the ball into play.

3—A limit of fifteen seconds has been put on the huddle.

4—A pause of approximately one second must be made in the shift play before the ball is passed.

5—A fumbled punt will be regarded hereafter as a dead ball and not a loose ball.

6—A missed backward pass other than that from the snapperback will be a dead ball and not a loose ball.

The first innovation, to my way of thinking, is particularly and pecularily idotic. The reason for this change is that football games have been won by makers of field goals who were not sustained by any particularly brilliant running attack. The moving of the posts ten yards backwards is supposed to make it ten yards harder to score a field goal. I predict that the goal posts will return to their former location before many years.

The second change is in an effort to speed up the game. Even the most conservative and status quo ante birds cannot object to this. The third is made with the same end in view.

The fourth will make it hard on the officials. In addition to knowing all the rules, variations thereof and watching twenty-two squirming, kicking young men, he must also train himself to be a human stop watch. It will mean one more way in which the losing team can claim that they were "gyped," and this by a short count.

The fifth removes from the game a spectacular melodrama which now and then has added color to colorless contest. Use your imagination. The score is 0 to 0. The Blue team begins a march toward the Red team's goal. There are but seconds to play. The Red stiffens and holds for downs on the ten-yard line. They punt out. The Red ends tear down the field. The Blue safety man catches to spiralling kick. As he does he is struck by one of the Red ends so hard that "his teeth rattle." He drops the ball. The other Blue end rushes in, scoops up the ball, and is off for a touchdown just as the final gun is fired.

If the game has been even up to this point, of course, it will be tough on the Blue. But there is a gamble in warfare and it should remain in football. The change tends to make the game duller and a duller game makes duller players.

It is the sixth change that may be misinterpreted. It encourages the use of the backward pass by minimizing the penalty for this pass. Many have confused this with the lateral pass, and for no apparent reason. The rule says, "if any such pass made on the first second or third down strikes the ground within the field of play or even out of bounds, either before of after having been touched by a player of either side, it shall belong to the side which made the pass at the point where it first strikes the ground within the field of play, or if it goes out of bounds before striking the ground at that point where it crosses the sidelines; and on the fourth down the ball shall go to the opponents at the same point. The pass from the snapperback to put the ball into play is exempt from this rule."

Mr. Knute Rockne, to whom everyone is looking for the clearest demonstration of what the rule changes will bring the game, was non-committal when he read the innovations. "The new rules? I'm well pleased with everything. The only exception is the backward pass. It seems that the rule will only make officiating more complicated. It's only an experiment, but I may be wrong. Don't forget that."

pected. Graduation, ineligibility and failure to return to school, has taken the following letter men from the squad: Dumschott, Carroll, Conant, Cavanaugh, Reiger, Pratt, Colosanto and Lindenburgh.

"Gimp" Carrington, a guard from last year is back in school but will not play football.

Pat Schnauffer, tackle and guard from last year, has not been heard from. From some source it was said that he would not return. Nothing is definitely known, however.

Facing a heavy schedule the prospect of a successful season are rather dark.

After the opener with Maryland on September 24, comes the game with the U. S. Marines at Quantico. This is followed by St. Johns in the first game of the season on the home lot and the first time these two old rivals have met in several years. Washington will stand a better chance of victory in this game than in any during the season with the exception of possibly Mt. St. Marys.

Following the St. Johns contest the team will go to Buffalo for a crack at Canisus. Then comes Loyola. The Mt. St. Marys on Washington field.

The season is closed by successive trips to Philadelphia for games with Drexel and Temple.

Lack of weight, experience and reserve material, three of the most essential things to a winning football combination, will tell heavily on the Washington eleven.

With several prospective stars among the freshmen it is mostly a question of building for the future.

Fans will see in the Washington team a well drilled, scrappy little eleven, the best that can be expected from the material at hand.

Notice To The Public

I hereby give notice that on the 17th day of October, 1927, at ten o'clock a. m., under authority of a Special Warrant from the Commissioner of the Land Office of the State of Mayland, I shall proceed to lay out and carefully survey for and in the name of Ruth B. Whitehurst the quantity of one acre, more or less, of Vacant Land, situate, lying and being in the Fifth Election District of Kent County, State of Maryland, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the southern boundary of a patented tract of land called Trumpington, and running in a southerly direction by and with Chesapeake Bay to a point of land called Wilsons Point and a cove called Long Cove, then with the western shore of Long Cove to the said southern boundary of the aforesaid Trumpington; it being the identical vacancy noted in an unpatented certificate resurveyed for Thomas Smyth called Resurvey on part of Trumpington, Smiths Meadows, etc., No. 179, Unpatented Certificate of Kent County, and never paid for.

GILBERT B. TAYLOR,
s14-3t Surveyor.

Notice To The Public

Following Labor Day which marked the end of the Tolchester season, the Tolchester Ferry Company resumed its former winter schedule. This is no way caters to the people of the Eastern Shore as it does not permit a practical length of time in the city if one must return the same day.

The Kent County Chamber of Commerce wishes to advise our citizens that the Tolchester Company is receiving $25,000 annually from the State which in turn comes out of the pockets of Eastern Shoremen as well as from the rest of the State and we are, therefore entitled to improved service.

If the people of Kent County and vicinity will communicate with the Chamber, the matter will be taken up with the Public Service Commission.

Nell C. Westcott,
Executive Secretary.
