GIRLS ON THE FARM

Keeping the boys on the farm was once regarded as a big problem. That was in a time when woman had not asserted her rights as a citizen and had never demonstrated that she could fill a large place in the commercial world. During the war, when called upon to carry on when able-bodied men were called to the nation's defense, women showed that there was a field for her quite as distinct as that held by men.

Accordingly, the pull away from the farms is just as strong today for the girl as it is for the boy. And the need is just as great for intelligent, energetic girls on the farm as for boys. They are needed to take their places beside the boys who are to feed the generation now coming on.

We often hear that the movement away from the farm is not alarming, because fewer people are needed on the farm, due to the introduction of labor-saving machinery and the consequent increase in the number of acres that can be farmed by one man. But the strong, able and ambitious boys, as well as girls of the same type, are as a rule the boys and the girls who leave the farm, because the farm in the past has not offered the advantages that employment in large centers of population has offered.

The problem is to keep not alone the girl, but the boy as well, who is anxious to get ahead in the world, and will give the best they have to the calling which they select.

There are many influences at work to resist the pull from the farm to the city, With good roads, cheaper motor cars, rural mail delivery, telephone, phonograph, electricity and radio, life on the farm is growing more attractive. Community activities in rural life are increasing and socal life is more varied. Girls' clubs and the schools are doing their share to create a more satisfying life for girls on the farm.

Individual initiative and energy are remaking farm life in America and making it pleasant for boys and girls to remain on the farm.

ACCIDENTS DON'T HAPPEN

Most people think of accidents as happening, as something unavoidable. But generally back of every accident is a cause. For this reason, an accident death toll of 80,000 persons killed each year is useless.

Excepting those of natural origin—earthquakes, cloudbursts, cyclones, floods, etc.,—experience of recent years points clearly to the conclusion that most accidents are avoidable.

The industrial safety movement, according to the testimony of experts in that field, has shown over and over again that accidents are preventable. If, then, they can be avoided by human agency, they are not accidents at all.

It has been demonstrated that fires can be reduced by the fire prevention movement. We know that while some automobile drivers have many accidents, others driving under similar conditions have almost none.

Once the safety habit is established, it is not difficult to maintain.

STUNT FLYING TOO COSTLY

Termed "the greatest sporting event man had ever known," the Dole aviation derby, over 2,400 miles of the Pacific, has been a costly affair which public opinion will again be slow to encourage. Announcement from federal quarters that the government will frown upon any immediate future plans for similar dangerous stunt features meets the approval of all thoughtful citizens.

Summed up the toll in the Dole derby was much more costly than the average layman realizes. Three aviators were killed on the way to the starting point in Oakland. Three planes were demolished. Two planes were forced back at the start. Two more crashed on the runway. And of the four which continued the flight only two finished. Then the fifth took out to fly the tire course and find the lost—and it too disappeared. In all three navigators, three pilots and a charming girl found their graves in the water of the Pacific.

Airplane racing over so dangerous a course and between many entrants has come into some question. America needs her good flyers to teach and inspire the youth of the land in flying—and not to risk life unnecessarily in stunts which mean nothing particular to advancement of aviation. The results attained through stunt flying are not worth the great risks.

PENNY ARCADE

Dropping a penny in the slot I turned the crank eagerly. This time it was "The Artist's Model" and I was prepared to see something worthy of my attention. A curtained room, an easel, a divan. In the center, a gaudy screen, and behind it a woman smiled, winked and crossed her lips. Then she threw over her flimsy dress. Next her shoes and hose. Then her underthings. And finally she put forward a white, shapely foot. I turned the crank faster when fr-r-r-r-rip, and the thing flashed and went out.

This was the third movie I had seen in the "Penny Arcade" at Tolchester, which by the way now has a row of machines with five cent slots. The other two were "A Night in Paris" and "The Young Bachelor Girl." There were about fifteen more for me to see had I been interested further. But I had viewed enough to convince me that they were about as thrilling as a 1902 bathing beach would be today.

But around me, bent over other machines, were things of interest. Next to me stood a chopped-down man of over forty. Red, plump face, moist eyes, filthy mustache, necktie-less. He turned the crank slowly, as if to make his penny last, and smiled a crooked, yellow smile. He was enjoying "In an Old Maid's Home."

Farther down the line and holding the machines in the crooks of their arms, were two pimply-faced youths. One looked up and a cigarette hung loosely from one corner of his thin lips. He slapped the other youth upon the back and almost shouted "Hot Stuff, Boy, Hot Stuff." He returned to his looking and turned the crank energetically. They were gazing at "For People With One Eye" and "For Married Men Only."

Just back of me, on the second row, were five men. Curved of back and ill-fitting as to clothes. They turned cranks in perfect unison. They were seeing "Adam's Temptation," "Fruit of the Gods," "Passion Paradise," "Through the Keyhole" and "Caught in the Act."

Another man entered. Tall, grave, pale and high of forehead. He took his place next to me, choosing with his piercing eyes, "In Madame's Boudoir." It must have been a choice morsel, this one that I had overlooked. He soon inserted another penny and turned the crank more slowly than before. With his eyes still riveted on "Madame's Boudoir" he failed to notice me as a turned to get a better view of the object dangling at his chest.

It was a Phi Beta Kappa key.

I may be mistaken but I believe that Tolchester has the only traffic cop in the world who directs the "go" and "stop" with an American flag. There he stands, day after day, an aged colored man, at the entrance to the park, and with a sweep of the flag, upward and inward or downward and outward, tells you which way you may go. I have often wondered just what would happen if his signals were disobeyed. My conclusion was, for I would never try it, that it would merely offend his dignity.

Some time ago, to a group of friends, I spoke of the money and effort wasted in taking women to a football game. I illustrated my point with an incident that actually occurred in the row back of me at the Penn-Cornell game last Thanksgiving Day. Just at one of the most exciting moments of the whole game a young lady asked of her escort, "How many downs in a quarter?"

One of the friends who heard this remark includes the whole crop of sports when he says the "place for the women is at home."

He, A. M., writes of an interesting bit of color, as follows: "A fair, very fair, young lady and her escort took their seats at Forest Hills just before one of the matches for the Wightman Cup in which Miss Helen Wills was playing. The referee admonished the assemblage with "Ladies and Gentlemen, the spectators are requested not to applaud during the ral lies.'

'What did he say, dear?' inquired the young thing of her companion. The latter, one would suppose, knew the beautiful one's limitations. Leaning toward her comely head, he patiently replied: "He says don't clap your hands while they are hitting the ball back and forth."

The letter was marked "personal." And it surely was.

Some time ago I called a young lady a "gold digger." And now I am rebuked with a quotation from no less an authority than Dorothy Dix. Don't get the impression I read Dorothy, for the following clipping was sent me anonymously:

"Dear Dorothy Dix—When a young man calls a girl a gold-digger, how should she take it, as an insult or a compliment? Mrs. L. R. G.

Answer—It's about as hard a knock as he can give her. It means that he considers that she has neither heart nor principle, but is a grafter who gets everything possible out of a man.

The Night Alarm

One awakens from a sound sleep. There is a sense of great dread—chill perspiration breaks upon the brow, and you battle for breath. That is the night alarm of "Asthma." The attack may last a few minutes—or a few days.

Many remedies have been tried for asthmatics, with success of varying degrees in allaying its most distressing symptoms, but the cause remains, unless the nerves serving the repiratory tract are freed to carry a full supply of vital energy that will restore conditions to normal.

That is what Chiropractic adjustments accomplish, and it is a significant fact that statistics show that 73 1-2 per cent of all asthmatics who see the chiropractor as a last resort are permanently relieved.

ASTHMA CONQUERED

"For several years I suffered from Asthma. I tried several kinds of treatment besides the drugs prescribed by a number of physicians, receiving no relief whatever. Each attack was worse than the last. For three years I was unable to lie on a pillow and appreciate sleep. A friend advised me to go to a chiropractor. After receiving three adjustments I noticed an improvement, and after the twenty-first adjustment I could lie down on a pillow and sleep through the night. I received in all, thirty-four adjustments. While under the chiropractor's care I gained 14 pounds."—MRS. EDITH ELLISON, Research Bureau Statement No. 2110-J.

X-RAY AND Chiropractic

I have installed an X-Ray machine of the latest model and most approved type.

The X-Ray reveals conditions that the naked eye cannot possibly see.

True, without an X-Ray, a certain per centage of patients get well. But, for maximum results, the X-Ray is the "doctor's most helpful assistant."

I am using the new Chiropractic methods which I taught at the Md. College of Chiropractic. This new method is painless, as well as stimulative and soothing to the nerves. Come in for a trial treatment and be convinced of the merits of my Chiropractic and X-Ray Health Service.

If you suffer with such conditions as Headaches, Backaches, Indigestion, Constipation, Nervousness, Insomnia, tired sluggish Liver or any other ailment, come in without delay and learn how you can be restored to health.

Until Sept. 6th, I will make an X-Ray Examination of all new patients for $1.00.

Grocer: "When I was a boy I worked for $1.50 a week and saved money." Clerk: "Yes, but they didn't have any cash registers then."

The clock attracts attention—its hands are never idle.

Ever notice? The average man doesn't know what to say when a proud mother holds out a baby for exhibition. The situation calls for some kind of a remark, that's certain. We know one man who has a stock phrase he always uses and he says it works every time. He just says: "Well, well, that IS a baby!"

Heard in local store: "Gimmie thirty cents worth of Climax." "Want it cut in two pieces?" "Nope, just one piece, so I won't bite my finger."

Give the old furnace the once over and see that it is in good working order and have the chimney cleaned and greet the coming winter with a smile.
