151 YEARS

This is a young country. Two birthdays were celebrated the 4th of July, Uncle Sam's and President Coolidge's. Uncle Sam was 151 years old and President Coolidge fifty five.

It is difficult to realize that as young a man as Presdent Coolidge has lived more than one-third the life of the United States. What matters our country has accomplished in so few years. Millions realize it as they travel about their pleasures each day. Cities spread out for miles into beautiful suburbs everywhere. Hundreds of thousands of beautiful new houses and people who can afford them. Twenty-two million automobiles traveling excellent roads—enough cars to carry our 120.000,000 people all at one time.

And, above all, the public schools, magnificent buildings, high schools and preparatory schools everywhere. And those school buildings, for all the children, are the finest buildings in thousands of communities. This nation has much to be thankful for, with free schools so prominent, and prisons so few. It was the other way round once, all over the world.

ABSORBING SUNSHINE

Picnic meals during the summer months are not alone for the restful change for the family, according to food specialists. During approximately four months of the summer most of us have to absorb enough sunshine to last our bodies all through the year.

In a different way, but jut as important, our bodies need sunshine to grow just as the plants do. It is good for the man of the house, then to eat out of doors if he does indoor work. It is particularly good for the youngsters to get this extra period of sunshine and fresh air. The mother herself after she has practiced a little on the easy ways of preparing picnic meals, will find that the labor-saving in cooking and in dish washing is a pleasant variety for her.

Eat, out-of-doors, then, whenever you can. If you cannot go to the woods or park perhaps you have a grassy backyard that can be a picnic ground. Porch suppers where paper plates and paper napkins can be used can be enjoyed as a substitute for a regular out-door picnic in case a shower comes up. In this way you will be getting fresh air, if no sunshine.

INITIATIVE NEEDED

When the pioneers came into this land they asked no government aid. They knew that they must fell the forests and build houses before they could have farms and homes. It required initiative, industry and vision to forsee fields of growing grain and comfortable homes where the primeval forest held sway. But strong men with the love of land born in them did not hesitate to tackle the job. Each did for himself so far as he was able and asked no odds. Only when the task was too great for one alone was cooperation sought and help then was asked only that it might be given in turn. When difficulties beset them they solved the problems themselves. The were self-reliant because they knew that on themselves depended success. Villages grew and became cities in response to conditions that demanded them. Whatever progress was made was due to the efforts of individuals working alone or in cooperation with others. Our forefathers had no delusions about work. They knew that nothing is accomplished without effort.

We appear to have gone far from the ideas of the pioneers. Too many people believe that there are shorter cuts to accomplishment than hard work coupled with good judgment. This, that and the other interest wants the government to do something, It is true that government can give encouragement to industry but the people themselves must act to gain the advantage of whatever inducements are offerd. There is an element that believes that plenty of money would relieve the situation. Russia has more money than any land on earth, yet the people are starving. Too many people appear to have lost initiative and want help.

We need to return to fundamentals. Instead of looking to the law-makers, Americans need look to themselves for accomplishments. We need a return of the initiative of our forefathers who did not know much about appealing to the government when they had troubles but did know a lot about how to work.

UNSUNG HEROES

It is a sad commentary on the ways of men that the world builds monuments to military leaders who slaughter thousands, while it permits a hero who offered his life that others might be saved, to suffer from want and suffering and actual hunger.

Attention has recently been called to the case of John R. Kissinger, living in Huntington county, Indiana, who was one of two privates in the United States army risking their lives in 1900 by permitting themselves to be infected by the yellow fever mosquito. The experiments which followed provided knowledge of the disease which has resulted in the almost complete eradication of the plague.

The heroism involved in the offer of Kissinger was complete, for he was well aware of the dangers incurred when he offered himself for the experiment. As a result of the bite of a mosquito that had previously fed on a patient sick with yellow fever, the soldier was himself infected with the disease and narrowly escaped death during the resulting illness. He was mustered out of the army a year later and settled finally in South Bend, Ind. In 1907 he became seriously ill and in 1911 the government gave him an annuity of $1200. Kissinger has suffered with repeated illnesses since the original attack of yellow fever. His wife, who assisted the family income by her own work is now ill and unable to provide the modest sum that she earned.

If it were not for heroes of the type of this man, the world would be harrassed by many deadly contagious diseases. They have been conquered by the self sacrifice of individuals, whose deeds lack the spectacular, but nevertheless are the true form of heroism.

BE CIVILIZED

Are you civilized? Be careful now before answering, because there is a guage by which you can judge yourself—and you may be surprised at the findings. Answer accurately—"How tolerant are you?"—and you will know to what degree you are civilized.

It has been aptly put by one writer that: "The measure of your tolerance is your distance from the jungle." Schooling and manners have nothing whatsoever to do with tolerance. These are only veneer. Many people never develop a sufficient degree of tolerance to qualify as civilized people. It is these who cause most of the trouble in the world. They crucify, they whip at the stake, they raid, they burn, they do not reason. Hate and brutality are their answers to logic.

"How may I know whether I am tolerant or not?" you may ask. Here are a few characteristics:

When a man says he will not argue he usually means he will not listen. He has opinions and he delights to make them vocal. But when he has told his side of the story, nothing remains to be said. He construes any discussion of the matter as an effort on your part to "argue." He begins with the assumption that any opinion that fails to agree with his is silly.

The world is full of such people. Good listeners are rare. People who will listen to the other side are rarer still. As a fact, too many of us are more or less ignorant, narrow-minded and intolerant. Young people, especially those with good minds, are intolerant of other opinion. Old people who have good minds usually have been mellowed and made tolerant with the passing years.

Be a good listener. Cultivate the open mind. Be civilized.

FUNNY FRIENDS

By funny I mean in no sense comical. It might have been better had I said queer; or, at least, Famous Funny Friends.

Take the first, whom we shall call Jim; A black-haired, dark-skinned young giant, who had he so wished and applied himself, would have been one of the greatest light-heavyweights in the realm of fistic endeavor.

It is doubly strange that such is not his desire when you consider that he is Irish and loves to fight. In fact, nearly all of his troubles are the results of fights. When fists begin to fly, and if Jim is around, his fists join the tatoo upon some unfortunate's skin. When I say unfortunate, I mean just that. Those hit by Jim always know it. He packs a terrible punch.

Once, and this is no fairy tale, when the Ringing Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus made Jim's home town, there was in the concert or after show, as is customary with all circuses, an offer of $500 to any person who could remain in the ring for five minutes with the circus professional. This pro is always one of the killer heavyweights with much brawn and little brain. When the offer was made Jim stepped into the ring at a dare from some friends. He did not stay in the ring five minutes. No, for in less than three minutes, the circus pro was being hauled out, feet first, and Jim was on his way to the pay-off tent.

It may be that down in his heart Jim knows he is good, in fact, too good for most men, alone. Anyhow he confines most of his fighting to trying to lick five or six cops, who have blackjacks and nippers, and usually accounts for about half of the arresting force when they start him off for a ride in "Black Maria."

I expect however that if the truth were known, the real reason for Jim failing to take up a professional career, is that he would rather die than keep rigid training. It is the night life for him. And when he feels the urge to earn a little money he takes a position as bouncer in one of his city's night clubs. The proprietors are more than willing to have him for two reasons: he is the best bouncer in town and when he is with you he isn't against you, and that means a lot if you will believe some of the night club owners.

And the second of my funny friends is "Rags." Rags is a hound, either rabbit or fox, (he could be taken for either and maybe both.)

If he has an owner no one knows it. His home is the town at large and he is getting old and given to reminisences. Much of his daytime leisure is spent in front of the postoffice. A close observation will often see him grunt and bark in his sleep as he chases the rabbits or foxes of old.

"Rags" sleeps at night on Main street between Queen and Front. In the little plot of earth that slopes from the pavement to the curb there is a sort of a shell hole, where on cool nights you can find "Rags." Even in the winter with snow on the ground and ice everywhere "Rags" can still be located at this place. In the summer and on hot nights "Rags" stretches himself out upon the brick pavement. His home being in my path of travel "Rags" and I know one another well. Every night that I pass I say, "Good-night, 'Rags' " and always comes an answering grunt.

Then there was a classmate in college, whom we shall call Bill, who claimed that he never slept. He further claimed that sleep was not necessary but all that was needed was rest. He went to bed at regular hours and lay down often in the day time. Try, as we did, we could never catch him in slumber.

Bill was either right or an awfully light sleeper. Many times in the middle of the night, I and other friends, have tip toed, softly into Bill's bedroom, making not a sound. Approaching his bedside without speaking we would look down upon him and alway his eyes would be open and immediately he would greet us by calling out our names.

I am inclined to believe that he was a light sleeper and was just "bulling" about not slumbering. But if such were the truth he never let anyone, even his closest friends, in on the joke.

"Splendid, Aloysius, I see by the papers that the price of gasoline has come down."

"That's right, Hepsibah, but I had no idea you had a car."

"I haven't but I've got one of those trick cigar lighters."

We know about a hundred who
Are havin' a spell o' summer flu,
Throat all sore and
Ain't it fierce? We sympathize.

Marshall Field said that the secret of success is to buy straw hats in the winter. We say that one secret of economy and contentment is to buy coal in the summer, duced prices, the lowest of the year are still in effect. Order your coal now and realize the sense of security and in the future feeling of warmth and ease in cold winter days that are sure to come.

Mother: "Quit pulling the cat's tail."
Small Son: "I ain't pullin,' it's the cat."

It is bad if your wife finds a letter in your pocket you have forgotten to mail, but worse if it's one you forgot to burn.

Feature Story

"Children," said the Sunday school superintendent, "Why are we all like flowers? What do we have that flowers have?"

"Worms!" shouted a small boy in the primary class.

And the superintendent crept under the pulpit chair to hides his emotion.

Wheat is moving. We are busy receiving daily deliveries at highest market price. Phone for quotations. Adequate facilities for handling your crop to the best possible advantage.

"If you are going fishing with the wife this summer," advises one of our newspapers, "take a hook and sinker." Another customer just writes, "send me another truck load of your good threshing coal." That's the way they are ordering it now. "just another load." Try a load and be convinced.
