Our State Finances.

A careful consideration of our State finances is probably the most important duty of the hour on the part of intelligent citizens; on the part of the leaders of our press, and especially on the part of our legislators and public officials to whose wise management and control the ultimate thought and wise and statesmanlike to negotiate a Treasury relief loan of half a million, we have reached a safety. The prudent and energetic and thoroughly economical management of the past four years has pulland the solid ground beneath us assures that if we continue the same as heretofore have scarcely been dreamed of-certainly never realized. The administration of Governor Hamilton has laid a broad and solid foundation for the future welfare of our State. Diligence and economy have left their ineffaceable stamp upon our State management. The very opposition and apparent hostility which has characterized the of-Treasury departments has of itself been a seeming rather than rea evil. Two distinctly defined lines of policy have been kept before the ingly hostile they have in reality (may | " we hope) been beneficial to each other and to the State. On the one hand the swooping energy and iconoclastic aggressiveness of our Governor has made the hydra of extravagance diminish and withdraw one after another its many heads, which have been, we trust, finally and fovever lopped off. On the other hand, while a less vigorous though we may fairly believe a no less honest and patriotic policy seemed to cast itself athwart the pathway of reform, it has perhaps in the long run told as a conservative element in State management and control which has not been without its use-perhaps we may say has subserved an important purpose. ed in the forest, and the bright fields of promise can only exist after many a sturdy blow and many a prostrate trunk, there is no less need to
