The Old Story. He came across the meadow pass. That summer's eve of eyes.

Oh! darling, darling mine. Was ever light of evening shed On loveliness like thine?

Long, long the sun had sunk down, And all his golden trail Had died away to lines of brown.

I will preface this little story of mine by saying that this particular ghost of which I am "guilty to tell" is, of rather was, not of the ordinary kind.

There is in the county of Newyork a wild, romantic region known as "The Big Gullies."

The waters of an extensive lake system, in seeking an outlet to the beautiful Muskegon River, have eaten their way down through hill and plain, creating innumerable ravines.

Where the pine trees, green and tall, On either side stood like a wall. While down the deep and lonely glen I heard the solemn, sad-sweet wail.

But I am forgetting my story. Long before I arrived at my destination the sun had gone down and the October moon hung like a brazen shield in the smoky sky.

to this neighborhood from England a family by the name of —. They were old people, and lived quietly, respected by their neighbors.

The old man saw, as he supposed, a stranger coming up out of the ravine back of the barn. The old man was surprised, as no one ever descended its steep sides in the winter.

After a few years the old folks died and the house for a time was untenanted. But strange sights were seen, and strange sounds were heard.

The brook still wanders through the ravines. In springtime the arbutus still blooms in the sombre shades; in summer the goldenrods on the crest of the hill spread their green banners in the sunshine.

And the belated farmers returning from the village often declared that they saw the self-same ghost wandering up and down the silent ravines.

The Gretna Green Abolished. The Chester News of last week says: "On account of recent legislation affecting the marriage laws in Pennsylvania, Gretna Green is no longer a place of refuge for eloping couples."

How To Double Your Money. A new and ingenious swindle on a small scale has just come to light in Irving, N. Y.

What's the lowest at top, and the highest at the bottom? The prices of theatre seats.

Suggestions to Collegians. If there is one thing the world needs more than another at the present time, it is men of earnest convictions.

The earnest man believes it is the very best thing in the world to be, and doctors and merchants and farmers for the same reason.

It is the old injunction obeyed: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might."

It is the old injunction obeyed: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might."

How To Double Your Money. A legitimate method, requiring but no risk beyond the cost of a letter and ten cents in silver.

How To Double Your Money. We will tell you a plan for gaining wealth, better than banking, trading or leasing.

How To Double Your Money. This wonderful plan without danger or loss keeps your cash in your hands and with nothing to trouble you.

She has a roughish eye. And a mouth for eustard pie. But she's the loveliest girl I ever seen.

The City of Honeyoons. Washington is becoming the Mecca of the newly married. It has distanced long ago Niagara Falls and all of the Eastern places where newly-wedded people used to go.

Some of the hotels make special rates and offer special facilities for the entertainment of the people away from home on wedding tours.

The bridegroom was a young Indian about 22 years of age. He was one of the best types of the civilized red man.

What is it that determines a girl's popularity in society? Is a question often heard in these days of social strife and aggrandizement.

One Slingerland, postmaster at Slingerland's, N. Y., has tendered his resignation to the postmaster-general in the following language:

Dear Sir:—In reply to your esteemed favor of recent date, asking us to teach you how to double your money.

Permit me to add that while I would not as a partisan presume to make any recommendation whatever as to who should succeed me, yet as a citizen I beg leave to say that Mr. — is a 'defensive' (i. e., Democratic) partisan.

This "smart Allick" no doubt knew he would soon have to "walk the plank" and before doing so thought he would become witty, and thus pave the way for the future should his party ever again come into power.
