After the Battle.

The campaign and election just concluded was the most exciting and interesting ever held in this county.

And, indeed, it is not surprising that this is so, since the local offices to be filled are more numerous and important than those of any preceding election.

Every local office except State's attorney and judges of the orphans' court were voted upon, while the election of a new and important officer, county treasurer, added fresh interest to the contest.

The fight centered around the clerkship, and it is generally admitted that the strongest men in both parties were made standard-bearers for this office.

Mr. Stevens' popularity. He still has the esteem alike of Democrats and Republicans, and was only unfortunate in having for his opponent a man whom public office had brought into intimate relations with the people, and whose liberality, faithfulness in official duties, and readiness to do a favor endeared him to all, irrespective of party.

For the four Republicans elected we have no word of disapproval. They are honorable men, and will make good officers. Unprecedented cutting made it evident that the whole Democratic ticket could not be elected, and we will make ourselves content with having placed in the most responsible positions efficient men and true Democrats.

With the Republicans it was a struggle for life. Having put in the field the strongest men that they could produce, and with a united party against one in which there was some disaffection, a total defeat meant almost annihilation to the Republican party in this county.

Maneuvering will run our courses and distances, and Whitaker will continue to instruct the youthful mind.

Party lines are not very tightly drawn in the Second district; Ernst and Curry must be immensely popular at home.

In the campaign just ended, and out of which grew a Democratic triumph, the excellent work of Col. P. W. Downes cannot be over estimated.

And Gorman's triumph in Maryland is not the least of the exuberant blessings that we have to be grateful for.

The Charleston Transcript believes that the tenure of office of members of the Legislature, sheriffs, and other short-term officers should be increased to at least six years.

Winners of the Laurels and Wearers of Willow.

Dr. Goldsborough steps from the physician's carriage to the Senate chamber, and will be as eminent a law-maker as he is a physician.

Rome remains at home and can give the whole of his time to his extensive packing establishment. He retires from the Senate with a good record.

Wright lays aside his chart and compass for a season to assist in framing laws for the guidance of the ship of State.

Rumbold, although defeated himself, has no reason to be ashamed of his record as a speaker, and his manly, whole-souled efforts for Democratic success.

Green and Graham tremble in the balance. Gadd will continue in the important office to which the people have a second time called him—and the next jury need have no fear that the oath will be improperly administered.

Stevens, the popular merchant and farmer, and wealthy property owner, will remain at the old stand, where he has for years conducted a profitable business and won many friends.

Towers, E. M., will still thrive as a successful farmer, encouraged by the consciousness of having fought a good fight.

Towers, W. F., leaves the plow to take charge of the county's money. Noble, Horsey and Ernst will for the next two years control the affairs of the county.

Chambe, retires with the knowledge of having worked faithfully for the ticket. The county has lost a good commissioner.

Hobbs and Edgel are relieved from the responsibilities of an office in which it is hard to please all.

Curry will continue farming and cattle-trading, while his deputy will occupy the jail.

Smith, whose faithful work in the Sixth district largely assisted in giving an increased Democratic majority retires with the full confidence of his party.

Maneuvering will run our courses and distances, and Whitaker will continue to instruct the youthful mind.

Washington Notes. WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 4, '85. The best evidence of the sincerity of the President's declaration that he would not be a candidate for re-election is his latest order, announcing that after the first of November he will refuse to see any person seeking an office, either for himself or in behalf of another.

Whipcord twill and homespun.

Work in forming niches for the memorial tablets is progressing satisfactorily, and it will not be long before the tablets will all be in their places.

There has just been concluded at Fort Meyer, the training school of the Signal Corps on the Virginia side of the river, the force of a trial conducted under the name of a tournament. The class at this school numbers eighteen, and is composed of young gentlemen well reared and educated, and who entered the service not only to serve their country in a useful capacity, but also for the special training they get in certain scientific studies in which they are deeply interested.

This school is under military discipline, and the students have to undergo a drill every day. The other day the Lieutenant whose duty it is to drill the class lost his temper because maneuvers were not carried out to his satisfaction, and gave vent to his wrath by applying the most insulting, profane and vile epithets to the gentlemen under his instruction, and because these gentlemen in a body passed resolutions protesting against such treatment and presented them to the chief signal officer, General Hazen, they were court-martialed for insubordination.

Some citizens interested themselves in the cause of the young men, and voluntarily employed counsel to defend them before the trial board. The lawyers, one of whom is Congressman Ben Bitterworth, received very little better treatment than their clients, and were most shamefully insulted and ignored by both the President and Judge Advocate of the board. Measures are being taken to present the case to the Secretary of War, to see if justice cannot be done. It seems that these military men who live off the money contributed by the people of this country for their support have laws peculiar to their own little coterie, and ignore and hold in contempt the laws of the country whose servants they are.

Instead of court-martining the young men, the Lieutenant should be reduced to the ranks and ordered to the frontier to drive a mule team, where he would be in his proper sphere. But out there even, the mules would spurn him with their heels in close proximity to his black-head.

It is thought here that the charges of wasteful extravagance in the management of the government printing office, under Mr. Rounds, will not amount to anything. They are the same as were made last Congress, and which Senator Gorman, the Chairman of the senate committee on printing, found to be groundless. The position of Government Printer is a good fat office, and somebody wants Mr. Rounds' place.

A heavy rain prevailed here Thursday night and did considerable damage. The water poured through the roof of the new Pension Office building and flooded the whole of the first floor, doing considerable damage, and extinguishing the fires in the cellars. The Fire Department was called on for engines to pump the water out of the building.

"Hole in the Day," a great grandson of the famous Chippewa Indian chief of that name, has asked for an appointment to West Point, and as he has a strong backing from Minnesota, it is thought that the President will appoint him. He is young, tall and straight, and of prepossessing personal appearance, with but little to suggest Indian blood in his veins, and is said to be unusually well educated for his years.

The flags on all the Government buildings are at half mast, out of respect to the memory of General McClellan, and profound sorrow exists at his death. His demise is a sharp reminder that the heroes of the late war are fast and peaceably passing away, and that the great struggle is indeed becoming a thing of the past. General McClellan came very near being a member of President Cleveland's Cabinet. He was tendered the Russian Mission and declined it, and only 24 hours before his death the President had arranged to offer him the position of Chief of the Civil Service Commission for which place, demanding as it does the exercise of the highest order of discipline and organization, the President believed him to be peculiarly fitted.

GEN. GEO. B. MCCLELLAN died on Thursday of last week.

Whipcord twill and homespun.

Whipcord twill and homespun belong to the middle style between rough and smooth that thousands on thousands prefer. And yet we can't account for the tumble except by the pressure of rough on smooth. The question was, What shall give way? Nothing but accident fell upon these.

The serge is as staple as any stuff in the store. Herringbone scarcely less so. Whipcord twill a favorite heavy dress-stuff. Homespun? Nothing more so. Good colors all through.

None of these are novelties; never were. They never bore the prices of novelties. They have fallen—not from novelty prices—from staples. Whatever happens, no greater surprise is coming. Those Lupin's dark-colored 50-cent cashmeres for 37 1/2 cents were not a greater surprise. What a stir they have made though!

Old news as good as new: those $1 ladies cloth for 75 cents; 56-inch and every color in favor. For more than half a year we have kept these cloths at 75 cents.

Peculiar black silks for dresses, dress-fronts, trimmings and wraps. Honeycomb network of large satin cord over ottoman, making a very thick fabric sometimes half as thick as a beaver cloth, extremely soft and light and warm. $2 to $3, 23 1/2 inch.

Another similar with somewhat less of the honeycomb character, lighter and closer, less velvety, with wavy lines from side to side—somewhat akin to basket-work. $3, 22-inch.

Broad-wale diagonal, soft like jersey, elastic on the bias $2.25, 22-inch. Satin de Lyon with a fine flat twill. $2, 22-inch. The same with the cord across not diagonal. $1.50 to $2.75, 22-inch.

Basket-cord, a cord with basket effect in the cord. $1.35, 22-inch. Broad flat platted cord with distinct sharp chamfers across. $1 to $2.20 to 22-inch. Tricotine—looks like jersey. $1 to $2.20 to 22-inch. Venetian, diamond armure. $1.35, 21-inch. Mourning silk, a light, dull, lustreless, cloudy, elusive, trembling cord. $1.35 and $1.50, 22-inch.

Such are the black silk fabrics that owe their peculiar effects to different weaving, to merely picking apart the lengthwise fibres differently at the successive throws of the shuttle—nothing but tricks of the weaver. One is like another but that. How different!
