New and Late Fashions

Just received at Baltimore from London.

S. DEVENNISH,

TAKES the liberty to acquaint the citizens of Cambridge and the public generally, that he has removed to the house lately occupied by Dr. Muse as a Medicine establishment, and one door above the store of Mr. Samuel Lecompte—in the above named town, where he continues to carry on the TAILORING BUSINESS, in all its various branches. From his knowledge and experience in the above business, he pledges himself to execute their work with dispatch. IN THE MOST NEAT, FASHIONABLE AND ELEGANT STYLE. He hopes his devotion to business, and exertion to give general satisfaction, and having procured the latest fashions in Baltimore, which have been received in that city from London, will ensure him a continued share of public patronage.

Jan 7 w

TAILORING.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the citizens of Cambridge and the public in general, that he has taken the shop, formerly occupied by J. Brown, in Race-street, near Mr. Ridgaway's tavern, where he is now prepared to carry on the

Tailoring Business

IN ALL ITS VARIOUS BRANCHES.

From his experience in the above business, he flatters himself that no person who may confide work to his care will be disappointed. He pledges himself to execute all orders in his line with dispatch, in the most elegant and fashionable style.—His attention to business and desire to give satisfaction, to all who employ him, will, he trusts, secure him a share of public patronage.

Anti-dyspeptic Elixir.

☞ One of the most agreeable and efficacious Medicines ever discovered for the permanent cure of those chronic states of derangement of the stomach and chylopoetic viscera, constituting that miserable disease called Dyspepsia.

No complaints are more common than the various modifications of this disease on the stomach, the functions of which are so very important to health, that the least derangement is attended with disagreeable consequences to the whole system. Perhaps there is none in the whole catalogue to which this viscus is liable, more afflicting, and less under the influence of medicine, than dyspepsia, or indigestion, the cure of which has hitherto eluded the skill of the faculty, and baffled the power of all ordinary remedies. A careful attention to diet has in many cases given some relief, but this abstemious regimen has been, to many, as great a source of vexation as the disease itself; for, when the palate craves, and the stomach is willing to receive, to deny one's self the chief luxury of life is no ordinary task.

The symptoms that characterize dyspepsia, or indigestion, are various in different constitutions, but for the most part, loss of appetite, nausea, sickness at the stomach, a discharge of water in the morning from the mouth, sometimes tasteless, but generally sour, heart-burn, pain in the pit of the stomach, loss of the peristaltic motion in the intestines, costiveness, palpitation of the heart, paleness of the countenance, vertigo of the head, flatulency, with roaring of wind in the bowels, and a long train of nervous affections too tedious to enumerate.—Under all these various symptoms the stomach is the primary seat of disease, a constant morbid secretion of matter producing acid and wind, owing to the debilitated state of this organ, causes some of the most disagreeable sensations we are acquainted with; the alkalies, magnesia, and ordinary medicines, do but little more than palliate the severity of the disease.

Being duly impressed with a sense of duty that every one owes to society, the proprietor has at length come to a conclusion, from his knowledge of the many cures performed by this valuable medicine, to adopt a mode of circulation better calculated to insure its usefulness in a more extensive way than it could possibly attain were it confined to the practice of a few individuals; at the same time, he is well aware of the powerful objection that unfortunately exists to this mode of introduction, inasmuch as knavish, ignorant pretenders, in many instances, have imposed on the credulity of the afflicted, with little or no benefit to them.

A number of certificates might be obtained, but they are so easy procured, with so little regard to truth, that they can have no weight with a discerning public.

Therefore, the proprietor is confident that a simple trial of this ELIXIR will establish its character in the cure of dyspepsia, over all other remedies in use at the present day.

On its own virtues it must stand or fall.

The basis of the Elixir is vegetable, and perfectly innocent in its operation; it destroys that sour taste of the stomach the instant it is taken, and stops the morbid secretion, by giving strength to the muscular fibre of that important organ, by which means the peristaltic motion of the intestines is increased, and costiveness obviated; a new action is given to the system, which puts an end to a train of distressing nervous sensations.

Another form of the disease in which the Elixir is admirably calculated to relieve, is the decline of fever, where the stomach will not bear the ordinary strengthening medicines indicated in such cases, it has the surprising effect of giving vigor, and restoring the natural secretions of the body, without increasing the febrile state.

☞ A supply of the above medicine has just been received, and will be kept constantly for sale at the Chronicle Office. oct 22 1am

Notice.

All persons are hereby forwarned against hunting or gunning on the premises of Gl[illegible] farm, the marsh included, under the penalty of the law.
