

MARYLAND'S NEXT GOVERNOR. The Largest Democratic Majority Since Bowie's Election. BALTIMORE, Nov. 4.—The contest in Maryland, which was a foregone conclusion as at an end. The ballots have been counted, and the count shows the election of Frank Brown, the millionaire agriculturist, by a majority variously estimated from 14,000 to 18,000. This is the largest Democratic majority since the election of Governor Bowie, Mr. Brown was post master of Baltimore during the Cleveland administration. He made his first political move in 1878, when he was elected to the Baltimore city council. He has since then been an active member of the Democratic party, and his name has been prominent in the party's organization in Maryland. He is a well-known and popular man in Baltimore and throughout the State. He is a native of Maryland, and has spent his entire life in this State. He is a man of high standing and high character, and his election to the Governorship of Maryland is a great honor to the State. He will take office on November 15th next.

THE EMPIRE STATE. Republicans Concede the Election of the Democratic Ticket.

FLOWER SUCCEEDS GOVERNOR HILL. The Heavy Democratic Vote in New York and Brooklyn Carries the Ticket Through by a Large Majority—Flower Runs Ahead of Governor Hill's Vote in Many Points in the Interior. ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 4.—The election of Rowell P. Flower to succeed David B. Hill as governor of the Empire State is conceded by his political opponents. His majority is variously estimated at from 15,000 to 25,000. The New York Tribune, according to an authentic dispatch just received, gives Flower's plurality at the smaller figures, and the Republican state committee acknowledged the defeat of Governor Hill at the close of the day. The World, however, publishes the majority for the Democratic candidate at 30,000. Fifty-four out of 180 election districts in Baltimore give Lattrobe for mayor, sixth term, 9,842; Warfield, 6,519. Lattrobe and entire regular Democratic ticket has about 5,000 majority. The Republicans claim the Third legislative district, Frederick county, 19 Democrats. The assembly will contain 66 Republicans against 65 Democrats. On joint ballot the Republicans will have 82 votes, against 78 for the Democrats, an increase of 3 Republicans. Albany, Nov. 4.—The state legislature stands as follows: Senate—Republicans, 18; Democrats, 14. Assembly—Democrats, 39; Republicans, 99. Republican majority on joint ballot next year, 14. Last session the Democrats had a majority of 2 on joint ballot.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—The election in Pennsylvania, though of more than usual interest, did not bring out the full vote of either party. In this city notably there was an unusual number of stay-at-homes in the Republican ranks, indicating that the cry against "Bardleyism" had produced a feeling of disinterestedness in affairs political in the ranks of the dominant party. There were enough Republicans who took an active interest in the campaign to roll up a Republican majority in the city of 20,000. The election of Gregg and Morrison for state officers, claiming a plurality of 20,000 for Mr. McCreary, for city treasurer, is assumed. Better Postal Service Still. To the Editor of the JOURNAL.

Now that the election is over let us introduce something that will be of benefit to both Democrats and Republicans, and that is postal extension for the farmers of Caroline county, and for the whole of the United States. Why should we not have our mail matter delivered daily right at our doors. There is no sound reason why the country should not have the same mail facilities as the city. The country needs this frequency and ease of communication even more than the city does. No one thing like cheapness will do more to increase farm comforts and enhance social life in the country than more frequent mails and free delivery of letters and papers. Now, when we consider that the farmers of the United States compose about 47 per cent. of the population, and pay about 85 per cent. of the taxes—taking all this in consideration—we are as justly entitled to have our mail matter delivered daily at our doors as our city friends.

It is true that this extension of the postal service would be expensive apparently. But the cost would be borne equally by the whole people, and within a very short time would be self-supporting. It is far better to extend the postal service in this way to country districts than to reduce the postage on letters from two cents to one cent—a policy that would mainly benefit the cities and parties who use the mails very extensively, and it would practically prohibit further extension of the mail service in the country districts. The great farming class are in need of this improvement, and now is the time for the farmers to strike the blow, as the politicians of both parties are eager to please the farmers at present, and not only that but our Postmaster-General is strongly in favor of this extension.

Let us co-operate in this matter, and help to secure free delivery and collection of mail matter in country towns. Let us demand it unanimously. As farmers and farm laborers let us circulate petitions in every postoffice district and send them to each of our Senators and Representatives, asking their support. CHARLES HOWARD, Two Johns, Md., Nov. 4.

After the Election. The Sun. In republics there is no king but the people and from their property and family relations descend there is no immediate appeal, because there is no tribunal superior to themselves. The voice of the ballot is heard in this land this morning, and partisans and conservatives alike will bow to the sovereignty authority which it represents. Those to whom it proclaims the jubilant tidings of victory will naturally for a time feel somewhat more elated and cheerful than those who espoused the losing side. It is a peculiarity of human nature to prefer coming out on top. The under dog in the fight may receive more sympathy than his antagonist, but the latter undoubtedly has the most fun. After all, however unpleasant it is to be beaten, the situation suggests to the disappointed many consoling reflections which they may apply as balm to the wounds and smart of defeat. Only one side can win in an election, and it is pleasant to see the vanquished to remember that if they couldn't win the other fellows, who did, are Americans and brothers, a fact which is frequently forgotten apparently in the heat of the campaign. The beaten side, of course, will not be ready to concede that it was wrong, but it may admit, without loss of self-respect or honor, that the country is still safe and that life is still moderately well living. And though, as has been said, there is no immediate appeal from the verdict of the ballot-box, and no court of higher jurisdiction than the people, it is consoling to this minority at such periods as to this recall the fact that there is always an appeal from the people to the people, and that the future holds other elections at which they may reverse the verdict of today. Thus from the nettle of defeat the losers may pluck the flowers of hope, and, while acquiescing in present results, look to the future without dismay or discouragement. It is especially gratifying to men of all parties, now that the struggle is over, to be able to look back upon a campaign which, while full of spirit and earnestness, was for the most part, free from the personalities and scurrilousity that so often disgrace and degrade political contests.
