While conditions continue most favorable to the success of the Caroline Democracy, it is not the part of wisdom to regard them with supineness, as some members of the party may possibly do, and flatter themselves that victory is sure in any event. Such a belief held by any considerable number of Democrats would, even this year, bring disaster in November. What is the first steep to be taken in preparing for a successful campaign? Every thought fall Democrat will say, the selection of candidates who measure as nearly as possible up to the ideals which are deep in the minds of quite a large number of the intelligent and very discriminating voters of this county, and possessing, of course, true party fealty. In the nearly two thousand voters there are many such men. In every section they may be found, it sought, and if urged may become powerful aids in accomplishing the task set before us.
