its position in the forefront.

any imaginative person the subject | bu of their exposition. Jamestown was the first English-speaking settlement in America. It might be called the parent of the colonies. From this first village others grew until there was a colony of Virginia instead of a nominal one. The Atlantic Coast east of the Alleghenies was dotted with villages and filled with colonies which grew to such proportions that, combined, they were able to overthrow the domination of England in 1776. Some pictorial idea embodying the suggestion of a focul point, a nest, or a place of beginning, may make a very appropriate and suitable emblem. There are a number of incidents which occurred in the early history of Virginia which might be worthy of illustration in connection with the above thought. Nothing is left of Jamestown but the old tower which formerly surmounted the entrance to the first Episcopal Church built in America. At one time Jamestown was a finely stockaded village capable of sustaining the shock of savage attack. These stockades are but memories, but they once were important facts. At Jamestown was held the first legislative assembly ever selected by popular suffrage in any colony. This was the forerunner to our state legislatures and national congress. This thought might beincorporated. From Virginia adventurous pioneers crossed the Apalachian Mountains, first settling the valleys between the Blue Ridge and Alleghenies, and proceeding westward, settled the Cis-Mississippian States. The men who first made this pilgrimage were the Knights of the Golden Horse Shoe, the only purely American Order of Knighthood. The Revolutionary War was concluded in Virginia by the Battle of Yorktown. The Civil War tory would not be as appropriate in this device as some thought connected with the seventeenth century. The Jamestown Exposition Company is offering $100.00 to the artist or imaginative amateur who can out of his inner consciousness create a thought which will subserve their purpose and will typify the beginning of the nation.
