WHAT THE INSTITUTES INDICATE.

The farmers' institutes are growing in interest throughout Maryland and this may be taken as one of the best evidences that the agricultural interests of the State are progressing finely. The seed corn contest this year is an innovation, likely to stimulate a study which has proven to be most profitable in many States. This involves the display of the choicest corn products and the selection from them of such grain as may be best adapted for seeding purposes. The making of selections by experts is of great help no doubt to many who attend the institutes. The prize is a two weeks' scholarship at the Maryland Agricultural College where much valuable information can be had by the young man who wishes to take front rank as a farmer, whose business is becoming more and more important as well as more profitable, when conducted in the best way. That the farmers of Caroline county are a wide-awake and progressive body of intelligent men is always shown at every recurring institute. The recent gathering at Preston showed this, and that to be held at Ridgely next Wednesday and Thursday will likewise no doubt demon strate it again conclusively. The discussions by some of our local men indicate that they are thoughtful Biggest students of the problems which they must solve to obtain the best results from their land. Caroline county's. progress in matters agricultural is a matter of proper pride on the part of all ourthoughtful citizens, and to this advancement way be attributed the very rapid growth in the taxable wealth of the county in the past few
