The feeling on the Pacific Coast against the Japanese will possibly be intensified by the success of one of the Mikado's subjects in cornering the potato crop of that section. pete with the shrewd Westerner in establishing monopolies and making "corners" on the necessaries of life. But a dispatch from Los Angeles states that a certain Kenya Shima has outwitted the "cornermakers" of California, obtained control of the potato market and will be "virtual dictator of prices until next season." Kenya Shima's operations may possibly be in violation of the Anti-Trust act. Even if they are, however, he is secure, for the machinery of the law moves so slowly that h might be able to "corner" the crops for a year or so before he was haled to court. In addition, President Roosevelt has unbounded admiration for the Japanese and might encourage them to display their ability as speculators on the Pacific Coast just to promote international comity. is too bad that San Francisco has this potato outrage on top of the school trouble. It is to be hoped that such a deplorable disaster almost at the very doors of Congress will stir the members of that body to action along th lines recommended by the Interstat Commerce Commission and the President. But if action is taken it should be of a character to require something more reliable than a mere nominal block-signal system. Not ... ing less than an interlocking system should be considered, and careful consideration should be given, also, to the question of some means of preventing enginemen running by signals which are set against them, something of the nature of a "trip" which shall set the airbrakes on anv engine that passes a danger signal. Doubtless the railway managements of the country, taken as whole, may be found lined up in opposition to such legislation, just as they were against the law providing for safety couplers and similar equipment A few of them probably will be more broad-minded, but none will relish the imposition of the burden of expense of installing, within a period of 10 years, for instance, a complete block-signal system. Nevertheless, if the actual cost of the railway accidents-the expense of damaged or demolished rolling stock, repairs to roadbed and damages paid for lives sacrificed and injuries caused, and other expenses fincidental to collisions could be LET figured up for a period of 5 or 10 years, it might be found that the total would represent a fairly remunerative rate of interest on the cost of a universal block signal Send samples and Prices.
