When we look at the price of groceries, Easter bonnets and other necessaries of life, we wonder where be W. C. T. U. even got the idea polygamy is likely to spread like

They won't have any more married men in the state constabulary in Pennsylvania. Perhaps on the old ground that it does not do for a military man to have more than one commander.

Some club women in Chicago have decided to reform their husbands by providing them with better meals. This is simply another adaptation of the old idea of civilizing the brute by improving the quality of his feed.

It is said that the government caunot secure enough pure food inspectors. Naturally, this is a difficult position to fill, as recent revelations have made it very plain that pure food is something very few are able to identify on sight.

A girl in New York ruined all her new Easter finery by plunging in the water to save a small boy's life. If this was not an act worthy of being rewarded with two Carnegie medals then that commission has no idea of what real heroism is like.

A suggestion has been made that as many of the Smiths in the country as can get there should hold a reunion at Jamestown. Nothing could be more appropriate. One John Smith did a great deal to make the Jamestown Exposition possible.

----It might not be a bad idea for the Department of Agriculture to join forces with the administration and drain all that water from the rai'road stocks for irrigation purposes in the arid West. Evidently the supply would beat the overflowing of Nile to a standstill.

A bill in the New Jersey legislature provides for a forty-year sentence for kidnappers. However, the punishment of kidnappers is subject to the same handicap as cooking a hare-first you must catch them, which up to date, has proved an exceedingly difficult proceeding.

A woman of ninety-tive who had succeeded for nearly a century in warding off the ills that flesh is heir to died of the mumps the other day. It is apparent from this that even the most rejuvenating draughts from the fountain of youth may have their disadvantages if they fail to make the imbiber immune to infantile dis-

Mrs. Russell Sage is in danger of being blacklisted by the rest of the philanthropists now that she added to her plan of distributing benefactions without encumbrances, the distinction of accepting the valuation put on her property by the tax assessors. This way of living up to her means is not likely to met with the approval of those who have cultivated the swearing-off habit.

A New York grand jury has actually indicted high officials of the railroad on which a fatal wreck with horrible details lately occurred. It now seems in order for a lunacy com mission to be appointed to examine the members of this extraordinary body who have disdained scapegoats and gone straight to the "men higher up" as directly responsible. In the meantime, if history repeats itself, the indictments will not be much more than curious souvenirs.

The principal of a Chicago public school expresses the opinion that the agitation against child labor-taking child to mean a person of any age up to 14 or 16-should be more discrimi native. Education is good and play is good, each in season, but the habit of work, it is argued, must be formed at early in life or it may never be . formed at all. And the habit of work is valuable-indispensable for most persons. "Four hours of schools," says the Chicago teacher, "and four hours of work alternating will make every child self-sustaining after the age of 10. Society and the Every child ought to work every day of his life. He is born into a world which requires work, and he ought not to be permitted to form habits of idleness and shirking. Child idleness is worse than child labor."

Peary is about to make another ash for the North Pole, but the ol reliable fishing pole for ours!

The difference between the two big cases of graft now on display is that the Californians have confessed while the Pennsylvanians are still in the haughrily silent stage.

A Philadelphia man who wore Queenstown, Md. straw hat on Easter Sunday was pelted with eggs by some hoodlums. The path of those who blaze the way to progress was ever a thorny one.
