FAULT-FINDING. There is no business in the world ea cause or other traduced and vilified ?-Who has not observed that the most a. miable members of a household are often the subject of a cansure and reproach ?

I have known men who were, in eve ry relation of life, an honour to the species,-who were intelligent, industrious, frugal, provident, temperate, chaste and affectionate-who yet never enjoyed a moment's comfort in their own houses, except during the hours of sleep. It being a duty peculiarly incumbent in actions, the most unguarded expressi- | his aid and protection: therefore, ons, the most unintentional omissions, would furnish their lynx-eyed pouses and exert their lungs in a manner sufficient to disturb the quiet, not only of a house, but of a whole neighborhood.

On the other hand, I have seen women, who, in all their department, were economical, loving, discreet and virtuous storation of peace.

--who were kept in a continual state of wretchedness by jealous, morose, irrita ble and whimsical husbands. With in cessant efforts to please, they were al ways giving offence. The meals would be too early or too late. The coffee too strong or too weak. The meat too rare plain, they were not fit to be seen. In recommended, to be observed by the people post near the road.
