We saw him fade before our eyes,

Like snow before the noonday sun,

And tried amid our tears and sighs To meekly say, "Thy will be done." But Oh! 'twas hard to see him die He was so gentle, good and kind He left this world without one sigh Nor east one lingering look behind Sad wife and mother dear. Oh, check the rising tear, United soon you'll be once more For he so fondly cherished here Is waiting for you on that shore. Brothers and sisters, smile again, For he you mourn is now at rest And free from sorrow, toil and pain Reposes on his Saviour's breast. But oh! when life's short race is run HIGHLANDTOWN.
