DRAGONS DRIVE YOU

BYEDWIN BALMER

Copyright by Edwin Balmer WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Jeb Braddon, young and fantastically so that she hardly heard him. successful broker of Chicago, is infatuated with Agnes Gleneith, beautiful daughter of a retired manufacturer. Rodney, a doctor, in love with Agnes, visits his brother, Jeb. Rod plans work at Rochester, Jeb suggests that make a try for Agnes before leaving In Rod there is a deeper, obstinate decency and much sterner restraints than in Jeb. Agnes believes to be happy, a girl must bind herself entirely to a man and have adorable babies.

CHAPTER I-Continued

indeed, men declared this and sought demns another to be a cripple or to on, Jeb! Oh, come on! had done.

dubbed him in contrast to his brother. | thers, in most cases, either. It's some The Devil (with women) and the Deep | condition we can discover and corfrom his brother's, the Devil's office, balance that we can uncover. It's simand was on his way to her.

cial preparation for him; and he couldn't turn to anything else if I wouldn't have liked it. She kept on | tried to. It's the one thing that matthe cornflower blue knitted dress which | ters to me-except you. became her slenderness and which of the morning had whipped a pink glow into her clear smooth skin.

She procured her own little coupe the station to meet Rodney. .

told he was coming and which implied more. He had no retreat.

had a chance? Or had Jud goaded him dreams?

train slowed, he passed her. He swung | pose. down "ecklessly, slipping in the snow.

"Little Agnes!" he said, the sylla- station," she said. bles escaping him. If she caught his come to say to her much more. She felt it.

She asked him after he was settled blindingly that it became almost an Once; that was all; he did not try to adventure to follow the familiar road | repeat it. to the house. It shut in Rodney Bradaway from contact or sight from all offer herself once more. others, increasing the tension of their intimacy, though during the drive, nied her. . . . Rodney said scarcely a word, and he did not touch her. In the house he made no attempt to gazing out at the snow. touch her. They went into the pleasant, easy "east room," which on or Rodney; she did not love him. She dinary days overlooked the lake. Now felt for him with a keen pity which the snow swirling at the wide windows | had no equal in her meetings with shut them in, as it had when they men; but she did not desire him. Was were in the car. Rodney appreciated this, and he sensation in your life? turned to her, gratefully.

shouldn't."

"If you want to, Rod." "You know the trouble with me. I love you. . . You sit there, will annoy you more than I must. with me when I think of you.

ter than he is." in his brown ready-made clothes.

Jeb, except in his brow, his chin and This house, which had never been York? The idea would not down. It his hands. Perhaps especially in his as happy as the home on Easter Lane, | wouldn't!) ble. Her eyes came to rest on his Of course the jaguar heads had noth- same blueness of eye and straighthis brother's never would have been simply a symbol of what had hap- of her lips and the turn of her good at such a moment. How this man fought the appeal of down it so? other man she knew.

excitements through her.

know, Agnes," he said. "The fact to regain what was slipping away."

that I've none; that's not my trouble. It's me and my life—isn't it?"

"Your life?" "The fact that you never could live

She said, without thinking, "Why not?" for she did not willfully intend to lead him on; but never, with any turning? man who had made love to her, had she found herself so confused by feel-but being my wife." "What would that be like, Rodney?" | was coming out. He will drive."

Now, why had she said that? Did she Twenty miles through this snow! want him to break the restraint he thought Agnes. Jeb would. held upon himself?

to tell you?" "Can you, Rod?"

"Can I?" He was gazing at her so that her eyes fell before his, fell to his hands, which he was keeping controlled beside him. "I can tell you all about it-what it will be every both knowing. There was no sense hour of the day-and night," he said, whatever in Agnes' pretending before went on, "of taking up another line, come her; and it won't do her any for you. I mean, with the idea that good!" might just possibly increase my

"Not you, Rod." lieve in travesties like that any long- say it. "The Deep Sea," her father had er. And it's not the sins of the fa-Sea! Well, the Deep Sea had phoned | rect. It's some secret of biological ply a problem of biology that I've got Agnes never thought of making spe- to work at as long as I'm any good.

"I've been trying to put you two deepened, by its lighter shade, the blue together. I mean to imagine you togoing over and over what he had done was doing, I was going back to you. and what he had set out further to No; I'll tell it all to you. Some day, I do, and his purpose appeared to him dreamed, we'd have a little girl like not only hopeless but fantastic. Yet | you. A very little girl with blue eyes he had spoken the words to her that and hair like flax as yours used to be.

"It wasn't strange, Rod. Don't Did Jud honestly believe that he think I misunderstand. Kiss me, Rod." opened the door. "When I go, I will, if you'll let me. to this in the belief that, by speaking I couldn't bear it now. I see how you Light One!" to Agnes, however hopelessly, he feel-sorry for me. It's plain I can would be the better for it-the better never have you. I won't make you for putting an end to his impossible say it. I know, I always knew. That's Standing on the car steps as the gone now, too. That's best, I sup-

Ten minutes later, Rodney left; and When he straightened, she was beside | she knew better than to try to detain him. "I'm driving you back to the

"No. Let me leave you here. . . . exclamation, what difference? He had You can send me, if you will, with Simmons; but you-let me kiss you them away.

Never with such tenderness, never beside her and she was driving him with so much strength restrained, had home: "You haven't had lunch, Rod?" a man's hands clasped her. His arm "I never thought of it," he admit- did not encircle her. His hands upon her shoulders, he drew her to him; The snow had begun to blow so she lifted her lips and kissed him.

"Again, Rodney," she whispered, Agnes Gleneith together, reaching up, stretching on tiptoes to

"You don't repeat-death," he de

Agnes moved about the empty house.

She could do no differently about love-desire? Was that the decisive

Was admiration for a man, sympa "You'll let me tell you what I thy for him, caring for him, nothing in comparison? Did no qualities in you or in him count, unless you desired him?

Flames were leaping and snapping you? And I'll stand here. I'll not from maple logs freshly laid on the huge stone hearth of the hall; and the I've said I love you. I've had medi- green glass eyes in the pair of jagcal training. I know what love is, or | uar heads on the wall opposite is supposed to be. But it's not that gleamed their reflection of the danc-. | ing fire.

I suppose every hopeless fool denies | Five years ago her father had shot | fifty, and he didn't appear forty. He it. He tries to make himself out bet- the jaguars in Brazil, having sudden- honestly didn't. ly found need to cease to be a manu-"You couldn't, Rod, she said gently. facturer of electrical equipment and own. He differed from hers, however, She was seated where he asked her to become, instead, a hunter set upon in having a crinkle in it which made to be, and watching him, looking up traversing tropical jungles to kill it take tousling well. (Always, in at him, so tall and troubled before something dangerous and savage. those mornings when she had run into her; and a little ungainly, as always. Among other trophies, he had brought his and Mother's room, he had been these back, installed them here, and tousled. Now she had not seen him

He was more carelessly molded than | dubbed them "Hansel and Gretel." | so. But had some woman in New hands, so lean and strong and capa- had descended undeniably after that. Father and daughter shared the hands, restrained close beside him as | ing to do with the descent; they were | ness of nose. Indeed, in the fullness

What had happened in this house? | finement of him; but even allowing physical sensation! And why did he Rogna, the little Swedish maid ap- for women's proportions, she was peared. She was a lady's maid shared | smaller. He was six feet straight, dis-Because he was capable of a feelin, by Agnes and her mother; a slender, tinctly more than average height; Agbeyond his brother's; far beyond any small-boned, golden - haired, bright- nes, for that comfortable countryside cheeked, impulsive type of Swede. She north of Chicago where women are Agnes recognized this now, if not was overemotional, indeed, but dis- tall, was rather under the average, with her mind. with her stirred in- creet. Rogna, if any one, knew what and also, for her height, slighter than stincts, which aroused their needling had happened in this great important her father, though no ounce of house; for Agnes suspected that her | "weight" appeared on him. He saw "Money means nothing to you, I mother, in her despairing helplessness to that, with squash and riding.

sometimes "talked to" Rogna. Never to a soul would Rogna repeat a word

"Mother's returned?" Agnes asked

"Oh, yes! Mr. Braddon just phoned." Agnes started. Rod? Was he re-

"Mr. Judson Braddon," Rogna said.

"What did he say?" "He is coming out. He did not in-"There'd be nothing in it for you quire whether or not you would be in, fect cupid's bow, and looking over her Miss Agnes; he said to tell you he "Also Mr. Gleneith has returned to "Being my wife? Do you want me | the city. He will be home on his > Mother! thought Agnes. "Do you require me, Miss Agnes?"

"No. Look after Mother, Rogna." "Oh, I will!" The two girls gazed at each other, Rogna. "She mustn't use rouge, Rog-"I thought for a time, Agnes," he na. Don't let her. It-it doesn't be-chance with you. Not to make more Lying in the deep, warm water in money, but to make myself different, her bath of palely tinted porcelain, for you. But I couldn't be different." Agnes shut her eyes and saw, not Rod on his train traveling away from her, "No; it'd be no use. There's only but Jeb forcing his car toward her one job I can care to do. You know | through the snow. She could see him what it is. It's-to find out what strain and laugh and swear when he makes one person live and another die. skidded, but come on, on, on to her, What brings one child health and whatever tried to hold him. Even in To be happy, a man required a girl; strength and happiness, and what con- her imaginings, he stirred her. Come a mate more openly, more frankly. pain or wretchedness for life. What "Rod-dear, dreaming Rod. I'd like Men's voices, at such seekings, be- does it? Not God, not Divine judg- to love you! I would; but I don't." trayed them, as Rodney Braddon's just | ment and punishment. We don't be | And he hadn't so much as let her

> It wasn't the fact that Jeb was making money, and Rod nearly none, that widened the difference between them. For Rod was right about it; money did not rule desire.

Money might be one of the factors that destroyed it. Money-or at least bling. the epoch of their marriage in which the most money had come-was separating her mother and father.

Before a mirror on the other side of that wall between their rooms, her of her eyes, and which "went" with gether-my life, as I live it, and you. mother frantically was trying to make "That's Merland Ross, the novelist. You I can do it in my dreams. Oh, I love herself more attractive to Father, and lucky bum! You would draw that table, you so much; and I can see I'll nev- to look younger. . . . But Rogna He ain't married, either. He's as easy er have you. . . . Don't mistake me | would watch the rouge. Rogna would to look at as Rand." in how I imagined you in my dreams, not let Mother look ridiculous to Faand drove alone through the snow to dear; oh, my dear. You were there there there when he came home-ridiculous waiting for me; that was all. You to Father, who used to kiss her when He, if he could, would have turned always were there for me at end of they hugged Agnes between them in self, but he looked as if he needed back. He sat by himself in the train, day. Wherever I was, whatever I the big bed of the house where Mother had been a bride.

Oh, what was love?

At last Father came. Baskerville, the huge boar hound, had affectionately change, knocked his hat off, and he carried it crumpled. Cravath, the butler, had

That meant her and no one else. Alit had been Father's greeting. Light why the dreams began; but they'll be One! Dark One! His two daughters nes light, like himself.

Light One!" he used to accent in tender fingers. rhythm as he tossed and caught his children in turn before he kissed them Claire said. "I bet they're precious to -Dark One! Light One!-and shooed

He bent and kissed Agnes now, careful to keep his snowiness from her dress. "Hello, Light One!" he repeated. "How's Dark One?"

"Oh, she's fine, Father!" "How're the busters?" "Father, they're wonderful!"

"Good. Where's your mother? In?" "Yes, Father; she's in."

Cravath had taken his things and disappeared. leaving father and daugh- son who mailed me back my notes," he ter alone before the fire. Agnes liked to have him linger with her, but the thought of her mother, waiting for him, tortured her. There had been a tened to tell him. time when, if she had not met him at the door, he would have leaped up the stairs, two steps at a time, to find what was the matter. Now he stood, back to the fire, with out impatience. He had been away for a week in New York City; and his daughter, swept as she was with affection for him, and with pride in him, and with gladness in all her memories, could not down disturbing doubts. What had he "done" in New York during seven days - and evenings and nights?

He was full of feeling; and how good-looking he was! You could not possibly think of him as a grandfa-

He was now within two years of His hair was as youthful as Agnes' little chin, Agnes was a delicate re-

(TO BE CONTINUED)

By KARIN ASHBRAND

Satin Slippers

©. McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

CLAIRE CARTER was applying lip stick to good advantage on a pershoulder into the mirror behind her at her alluring little self. The new waiter had been most attentive all week. Already he had asked her to a college dance. He was a rahrah boy, working for his tuition. Nothing so classical as this young Adonis had ever come into Claire's life before, His being there in the same restaurant with her made it easier to be on her feet all day. To carry heavy trays to impatient consumers. To receive puny tips, which, however small, served to eke out the pittance alloted to the Yellow Canary's help.

Rand was at the bar ordering drinks for the jolly fat quartet at the window. On his way over to their table he slid over to her and whispered out of the corner of his mouth so that the boss wouldn't notice, "Can you go?"

"I told you I couldn't," she whispered back, "I can't get those satin slippers. I can't go barefoot." "Let me buy them for you."

"No; thanks." "You can pay me back next pay

"No. I gotta give all my money to Ma this week 'count of her operation. She's paying off the doctor. Ask one of the college dames."

"I wouldn't enjoy it. None of them can dance the way you do." Claire approached her table with the appropriate smile on her lips. The smile passed unnoticed by the man sitting there waiting, alternately studying the menu and scribbling on scraps of paper. "Just a club sandwch and coffee," he ordered abruptly, and kept on scrib-

Gertie, on the next table, intercepted her on the way to the kitchen. "D'ya know who that is?" she asked in an excited stage whisper, indicating the Claire brought back Mr. Ross' lunch, and took a good look at him. He was sleep, and plenty of it.

He paid scant attention either to her or to his lunch, except to bolt it absently. Then he handed her a dollar bill and left without waiting for his scraps of paper from the floor where he had dropped them. She crumpled "'D evening, Cravath. . . . Hello, them in her hand and started to throw them in the rubbish container. "Say, gimme those," demanded Claire.

ways, as long as she could remember, "You aren't going to throw those "Lands! Them are no good!" ex-

-his two bables, once. Beatrice al- ploded Gertie. "Lookit! Some of 'em ways had been dark, like Mamma; Ag- are scrawled on wrapping paper. Little bits of craps!" She handed them "Dark One! Light One! Dark One! to Claire who smoothed them out with

"They belong to my customer, him. Writer folks scribble on tissue paper if they can't find anything else. I'm going to send them to him."

She thrust them into her pocket, and the minute she was off duty she slipped into a telephone booth to look up his address. Marland Ross. Her lips caressed the name even as her pen wrote it on a restaurant envelope, Rand stamped it and mailed it for her. The next day Marland Ross appeared at the restaurant and asked to see the manager. "I want to talk with the per-

Rand was standing beside the boss. "It was Claire Carter, sir," he has-

Claire was sent for. Merland Ross held out his hand and Claire laid hers into it. "You don't know what those notes meant to me," he told her, "I was nearly crazy when I found out I had lost them. They were the finishing chapters for my new novel, 'Rising Tide.' I sent it off today. You're a smart little girl. I felt that I had to reward you somehow, Thanks," He smiled down upon her from his famous height, withdrew his hand, and left. Claire gulped and shut her eyes. In her hand was a crisp crackling slip of paper. She dared not look at it. She had never received a reward before. Perhaps it would be the price of a pair of satin slippers. Rand was looking at her proudly. She could feel his eyes on her, and she opened her own eyes suddenly to stare at the bit of paper in her hand.

It was green. One one side of it was written in Merland Ross' bold scrawl: "Give to bearer one complimentary copy of 'Rising Tide.' " On the other side there was noth-

The Ukrainian Flag

The flag of the U. S. S. R. is red, with the national device in the upper left-hand corner. The constituent republics of the union have their own flags, likewise red, with the initials of the name of the republic in the upper left-hand corner. In the case of the Ukraine, the initials are the Russian equivalent of U. S. S. R., meaning Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic.

"Having an Ax to Grind" "Having an ax to grind" means to be moved by personal motives or influenced by a desire for revenge, or to have a grudge against a person.

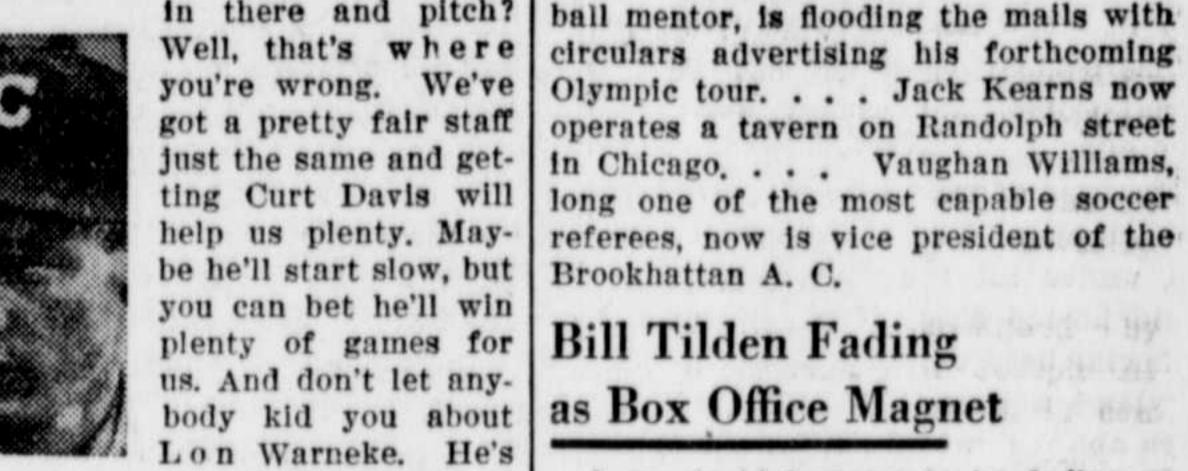

Grimm Full o' Hope Though 1936 Pennant Chase Is Plenty Tough

@ New York Post .- WNU Service.

CHARLEY GRIMM-"What's that? No, I'm not thinking about becoming a pitcher just because I've got night. The lights and shadows make it this big yellow-finger mitt on and because you've seen me warming up for ten minutes. I'm merely breaking it in | fer to aim at the outside corners rather for Larry French, who's got a lot of other things on his mind now besides league champions, you've got to help out wherever you can, and- What's that I'd be a lot more help if I did go | Elmer Layden, the Notre Dame foot-got all his stuff and Warneke word, there's never been a thing wrong with his arm. Also you can believe very well at the box some more of the same about Bill Lee. I'm telling you that we'll be going along smoothly before long, and-"Sure, I know Galan and Hack are not hitting as good as they did this time last year. But they're both fellows who're really good hitters you can't keep them down. They're likely to snap out of it any day now and keep on going. Besides, we're getting some pretty fair power in there It was Gertie who picked up the anyhow, aren't we? Sure, we are. Look at Billy Herman. He's slapped seventeen doubles so far and you now know that's the kind of smart belting that wins ball games, and-

That Kid Cavaretta Is Okay at First Base

"How about first base? Well what about it yourself? That young Cavaretta is coming along okay. He's fielding pretty and he's picked up plenty up there at the plate. So-"Yeah, maybe I could go out there because I honestly am feeling swell. But I tried it twice this spring and each time that ligament slipped in my back. So, isn't it better for me to be ready if necessary, and meanwhile give | though the average among other clubs a kid who's going so well his due is double that amount. . . . The and- Don't believe a word of it. The yarn was dreaming. be closer than it's been for years with mer with the able assistance of Col. those second-division boys giving the Jacob Ruppert, . . . Willie Herkert, rest of us plenty to worry about. Pitts- | secretary of the German-American Footburgh's got all the power in the world | ball association, once starred with the and if those Pirates just had another | Brooklyn Wanderers and was a memgood pitcher it might be that nobody | ber of the G. A. F. team which toured could stop them. they had one fence buster they'd be belief that no southpaw can succeed at blamed hard to beat. Almost all of the | the game. guys in the race think they've got such a good chance that they just hate to up with the times. In states where give strength to get strength in some | there are laws against the hopping of other spot and-Okay, go on over and horses they start work on a prospect interview Terry. I've got to get some by flashing a badge and hinting that hitting practice anyhow."

Terry Needs a Pitcher but Where's the Trade?

Bill Terry-"How do I know how long my leg's going to let me stay in there? It swells up big and is so sore at night that it's pretty tough sleeping. and what's worse there doesn't seem to be anything anybody can do for it. But I'll stick in there just as long as I can. "Bartell? Don't believe everything you read. He's had a charleyhorse in his leg and that's naturally slowed him some, but he's coming along all right.

"Trade? Certainly I'd make one. I'm not saying we haven't looked bad a few times in the last couple of weeks, but we've got a pretty fair ball club. Give us another pitcher to go along with what we have and-give up your right eye and a few other track to track and one day it left beknickknacks such as that they'd prob- fore the races were over. ably still be asking how you expected TIPS ON TURF TERMS:

that torace. Maybe it won't be decided until ever a favorite. three or four clubs are at the wire, SHORT-A horse (sometimes a playwhich would suit us swell the way er) which tails off after making most we're keeping close up now. Maybe of the pace-also favorite players all the breaks will decide it. Anyhow, wind up short. there's no soft spots.

DREAKNESS Pickings: Bold Venture joined an Illustrious company of ponies including Sir Barton, Gallant Fox, Burgoo King and Omaha that have won both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness. Twenty Grand and Cavalcade, Derby winners, were second when they tried their luck at the Preakness. Only two fillies have reached the winners' circle. They were Rhine Maiden in 1915 and Nellie Morse in 1924. . . . Tom Healey has been the most successful of the modern trainers in the $25,000 classic. He saddled four winners, Vigil, Pillory, Display and Dr. Freeland. The combination of Owner G. L. Lorillard and Trainer R. W. Walden was tops among the ancients. They had all five winners from 1878 to 1882. Walden also was the winning trainer in 1875 and was both owner and trainer of Refund, who romped home in front in 1888. . . .

Just to show that things were on the up and up in those days a horse named Welcher finished second in a field of two in 1884.

Not in the Box Score: There is an unwritten baseball law that there shall be no "throwing" at so difficult for a batter to dodge that even the hardest-hearted pitchers pre-than be charged with manslaughter. . . Baltcazar Sanchile, recognized new gloves, and asked me to do it for in Europe as the world's bantamweight him. It's all in the day's work for a champion, says he started boxing bemanager. Even when you're with the cause he didn't want to go to work. . . The Meusels, Irish and Bob, are playing semi-pro baseball in Los Angeles. . . . Pa Stribling now peddles "You think from what you've seen automobiles in Hattiesburg, Miss. . . . in there and pitch? ball mentor, is flooding the mails with Well, that's where circulars advertising his forthcoming you're wrong. We've Olympic tour. . . Jack Kearns now got a pretty fair staff operates a tavern on Randolph street just the same and get- in Chicago. . . . Vaughan Williams, ting Curt Davis will long one of the most capable soccer plenty of games for Bill Tilden Fading body kid you about as Box Office Magnet

A sports idol seems to be fading at last. Although the Lott-Stoefen-Vines unit continues to do office, Pro Tennis Promoter Bill O'Brien Is losing money on his Bill Tilden troupe. . . . Tickets for the Louis-Schmeling affair cost four cents each. That is, Mike Jacobs pays $40 a thousand for the cardboards and the printing on them. This, incidentally, is a high-class job, since fight ducats ordinarily are prepared for $6 a thousand. . . The Evans brothers, who run the Loch Sheldrake resort where Jim Braddock trained to win his world championship, continue to bet that the luck of their spot will hold good when the title finally is defended. . . Nasty mens say that the real head of the opposition wrestling trust is Billy Sandow.

Mike Jacobs, the sports impresario who probably knows more about Broadway than any living man, continues an old-fashioned guy under his modish haberdashery. He wears long underwear the year around, . . . There are big-time players who will bet you that the average annual salary of the Athletics is less than $2,000 a year al-Children's Aid Society Sandlot league, fellow who started that swelled head which provided recreation for 3,998 baseball playing youngsters last year, "The rest of the race? It's going to is continuing the good work this sum-Germany in 1930. . . Left-handed "Brooklyn's no soft touch either. If golfers no longer are bound by the > Racetrack touts are gents who keep they are narcotic agents. The rest of the sales talk is to the effect that they have spotted several gee-gees which are hopheads and are letting them run so as to gather conclusive evidence against the owners. Thereupon three out of five prospects fall in with the idea of getting down a sizable bet on his sure thing. . . . If you have been wondering where wrestlers come from take a look at Oklahoma. Mat performers from that state won 18 of the 23 amateur and collegiate titles. including six of the seven Olympic team spots this year.

The Giants might like to know that several Western opponents hint they quit when the going gets tough. The athletes say that when a Dean or a Warneke is rifling the ball across, the Polo Grounds performers seem all too anxious to get away from the plate as quickly as possible, so they (Joe Moore is excluded by the scandalmongers) hit "Why don't I get one then? Say, feebly at bad balls instead of waiting why don't you go on over there and out the speed hurlers. . . . Bookmak: interview Grimm. What? Okay, you ers are happy to discover that even can stay then, but don't ask any more | the parimutuel machines have a bit of questions like that. Haven't you ever larceny in them and that a totalizator met any other managers in this league? once welched in England. This was a Don't you know that if you were to movable device that was carted from

BILL DALY-A horse which takes "What? You're right, it's a tough the track and is never headed. Hardly GUMBO-When the track's muddy.