The Second Instinct

C Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

D SYCHOLOGISTS tell us that the human being is born with but two instincts. One of these is fear. But if man is afraid, man is therefore a coward. Yet the greatest coward of all is the man who lacks the courage to admit his fear.

Ferdie Gleason sat in the cockpit of the plane and looked out at the girl. The girl, Jill Evans by name, was standing some distance away, talking to a man wearing breeches and leather jacket and boots. As he talked he twirled an aviator's helmet about his finger and smiled pleasantly. The man's name was Ted Vesta, and Ferdie suspected that they were talking about him, and laughing at him, too. Ferdie watched them, and flushed to the roots of his hair.

Everything had been all right until Ted Vesta floated down out of the clouds one day in his tri-motored mono. Ted had a sackful of medals and newspaper clippings about himself, which he didn't have to show because every one knew how famous he was anyhow. He met Jill Evans at a dance two nights later, and that was the beginning of something that changed Ferdie's whole life.

Ferdie hated airplanes. He was afraid of them because the instinctive fear of falling with which he had been born was strongly embedded. But the way he felt, he'd rather fall from a 10,000-foot altitude than admit this fear to Jill

Evans. Unhappily, he loved her. All this explains why Ferdie was sitting in the cockpit of a certain airplane on a certain bright afternoon. He was waiting for Instructor Ben Upton to climb in beside him for his fourth lesson in flying. All told, Ferdie had had three hours of instruction. Jill and Ted Vesta had come out to see how he was doingand to laugh at him. That's what burned Ferdie up. He thought ruefully, dismally of what little chance he had, now that Ted Vesta was his rival. It would take-why, it would take years to become as famous a flier as Ted, and in the meantime-

Ferdie's cheeks drained of color. Good Lord! Did Upton expect him to fly the thing alone after a mere three lessons? He glanced over the cockpit toward Jill and Ted. They had ceased talking and were looking at him. Jill waved her hand in salute and smiled.

The plane wobbled a little on the runway, righted itself, gathered speed. At the far end it lifted, rose evenly, cleared the fringe of trees at the southeast boundary, climbed steadily. At 2,000 feet it levelled off, banked and circled back over the field, levelled out again, fought once more for altitude and reached 3,500.

levelled once more and banked. Ferdie wasn't reasoning. He couldn't reason. His body felt numb. paralyzed with a horrible desperation. He shut his eyes. Clearly he heard the voice of Ben Upton. It was yesterday. Ben was sitting beside him, speaking into the ear phones, telling him what to do and how to do it, calm, reassuring, unhurried. Mechanically, unconsciously Ferdie worked the stick. He opened his eyes and looked down. He saw a speck of white, and knew it to be the snow-white jacket worn by Jill Evans. High above the very edge of the ocean, where the breakers tumbled and foamed, the plane banked again, circled, came back, roared over the field, turned once more and dipped. Its motor decreased in volume. It came in evenly, utilizing every ounce of wind pressure, skimmed the earth, alighted. A dust cloud arose. the motor roared, then died. Ferdie looked over the cockpit's edge. Ben Upton came up on the run.

"You fool! What's the idea?" "Didn't I do-all right?" "All right, yes. But you ought to know better-after three lessons."

"You said to take her up." Ben's mouth fell ajar. He stared and then understanding came. "? said to 'warm her up,' not 'take

Jill Evans was coming across the field, followed by Vesta. "Why, Ferdie, it was grand! Ihonestly, I couldn't believe it. Even Ted admitted he wouldn't have dared-after his third lesson." She leaned over the cockpit's edge. Ferdie grasped her hand and hung on. He looked into her eyes and felt different, better.

Intelligence Quotient The letters "I. Q." are an abbreviation for "intelligence quotient," a number denoting the intelligence of a person, determined by dividing his mental age by his chronological age. Chronological years above fourteen (or, by some, above sixteen), are disregarded. The mental age of a person is determined by intelligence tests, any one of several tests, as the Binet test, the alpha test, or the beta test, which consists of standard questions and answers.

Home Heating Hints " John Barcley

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

Hints By John Barclay How to Check "Chimney Loss," Greatest Waste in Home Heating X/ HAT is "chimney loss"? Well, that's a term we heating experts have for heat that goes up the chimney and is wasted.

Yet it's really a simple matter to save money by reducing this loss-convert "chimney loss" to "useful heat," as we call it. Here's the remedy:

Next time you refuel the fire. move the handle of the turn damper (that disc or plate-like damper inside the smoke pipe) 1-16th of an inch toward the closed upright position. Then, if the fire keeps on burning too freely, turn the damper another sixteenth of an inch. Repeat this operation until you find the correct adjustment -one that will deliver the greatest amount of useful heat with the least "chimney loss."

Once you have found this ideal adjustment of the damper, mark the position on the smoke pipe with a piece of chalk or something that can be plainly seen, and leave the damper set at that mark.

Bear this in mind: The nearer the turn damper is set to the closed position the smaller the "chimney loss" and the greater the volume of "useful heat" that goes to properly heating your home. And, of course, the lower your fuel bills.
