And when they are gone I sit dreaming Of my childhood too lovely to last; f leve that my heart will remember Ere the world and its wickedness made me A partner of sorrow and sin, And the glory of gladness within.

Oh! my heart grows weak as a woman's, And the fountains of feeling will flow, When I think of the paths steep and steny, Where the feet of the dear ones must go; Of the mountains of sin hanging o'er them, Of the tempest of Eate growing wild; Oh I there's nothing on earth half so holy As the innocent heart of a child. They are idols of hearts and of households,

They are angels of God in disguise; His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses, His glory still gleams in their eyes; Oh! those truants from home and from heav They have made me more manly and mild, and I know how Jesus could liken The Kingdom of God to a child.

lask not a life for the dear ones, All radiant, as others have done, But that life may have just enough shadow To temper the glare of the sun; would pray God to guard them from evil, But my prayer would bound back to myself, Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner, But a sinner must pray for himself.

shall leave the old house in the Autumn, To traverse its threshold ne more; Ah! how I shall sigh for the dear ones That met me each morn at the door! I shall miss the good-nights and the kisses, And the gush of their innocent glee, The group on the green, and the flowers That were brought every morning to me.

I shall miss them at morn and at eve, Their song in the school and the street; I shall miss the low hum of their voices, And the tramp of their delicate feet. When the lessons and tasks are all ended, And Death says, "The school is dismissed," May the little ones gather ground me To bid me good-night and be kissed.
