The Mountain Heart-Ease.

By scattered rocks and turbid waters shifting By furrowed, gladed dell, To feverish men, thy calm, sweet face uplifting Thou stayest them to tell.

The delicate thought that cannot find express

For ruder speech too fair, That like thy petals, trembles in possession, And scatters on the air. The miner pauses in his rugged labor, And leaning on his spade,

Laughingly calls to his comrade-neighbor, To see thy charms displayed. But in his eyes a mist unwanted rises,

And for a moment clear, Some sweet home face his foolish thought sur And passes in a tear.

Some boyish vision of an Eastern village Of uneventful toil, Where golden harvests followed quiet tillage, Above a peaceful soil.

One moment only, for the pick uplifting, Through root and fibre cleaves, And on the muddy current slowly drifting. Are swept thy bruised leaves.

Entrap the ants by means of narrow sheets of stiff paper, or strips of board covered with some sweet, sticky substance. The ants are attracted by the sweets, and, sticking fast, can be de stroyed as often as a sufficient number are entrapped.
