Democratic Nominations.

FOR GOVERNOR,

Hon. WM. PINKNEY WHYTE,

OF BALTIMORE CITY.

FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL,

HON. ANDREW K. SYESTER,

OF WASHINGTON COUNTY.

FOR COMPTROLLER,

COL. LEVIN WOOLFORD,

OF SOMERSET COUNTY.

OUR CANDIDATES.—We give below the address of the Hon. Wm. Pinkney Whyte to the Convention on the 19th ult., and in another column the letter of acceptance of the Hon. Levin Woolford.

They both breathe the right tone, and have a ring of manly sincerity which will always find a responsive thrill in the hearts of the Maryland Democracy. The published account gives but a faint idea of the real power and force of the address of Mr. Whyte. The writer had the good fortune to be present on the occasion, and as in a deep and manly voice that could be heard in every corner of the vast hall, he declared that "he had no interest in any ring, in any corporation" and that "if his nomination by the convention as Governor of Maryland should be ratified by the suffrages of the people, there should be no power behind the throne, that he would be the Governor of the whole people," we felt the conviction that we had for our leader, in this campaign against the radicals, a man in whom we could take a just pride, and who in the high position he is destined to fill would do honor to the State of Maryland.

We happened to be one of those appointed on the committee to wait on Mr. Whyte and inform him of his nomination as Governor of Maryland. While in his office he gave expression to sentiments which we admired so much that we cannot forbear repeating them to our readers. After some general remarks quite complimentary in their tone to Dorset which he visited many years ago, he said "you gentlemen from the Eastern Shore have generally firmly supported Judge Carmichael and I admire you for it, for he is one of the noblest Democrats in our State. And now that this matter is over, I am free to say what I could not and would not say during the canvass. There is no warmer admirer of Judge Carmichael in the State of Maryland than I, and such is my reverence for his talents, his virtues and sterling Democratic worth, that had I known he would be presented by his friends as a candidate—indeed, had I not been assured by gentleman who ought to have known, that he would not be a candidate, my name should not have gone into this Convention. I should have declined being a candidate against a man whose life-long services and worth have endeared him to our people.

But many of the citizens of Baltimore took up an idea that the City ought to have a Governor, and numerous friends were kind enough to name me in connection with the position. That it would involve me in great personal trouble and considerable pecuniary loss by the disturbance of my professional duties I foresaw, but, willing or unwilling, my first duty is to my people, and when the Baltimore Democracy with singular unanimity requested the use of my name I had no right to refuse. And right here I can assure you that it was only that unanimity that overcame my reluctance to move in this matter. My name went before the people of the State, and after some time the news at last came across the Bay that the friends of Judge Carmichael would present his name to the Convention. It was then too late for me with honor to retire—for my own sake and for the sake of those of my friends who had zealously espoused my cause, I could not go back—I had no choice but to keep on the road I had entered, though it has been with no little pain that I have found myself in this position of antagonism to Judge Carmichael."

Such language as this comes gracefully from a younger Democrat in speaking of a gentleman grown gray in the services of the party, and who was fighting Democratic battles when the former was playing marbles and bandy. It gives us the assurance that our standard bearer is a man in whom the people can trust.

Then with drums beating, and trumpets sounding, and banners flung to the breeze, strong in the right and in confidence in our leaders and each other, let us march into the contest resolved to take no backward step until the victory is won, and for four years more we are safe from the baneful rule of the Republican party. What that rule was we can all bitterly remember.—Let no personal considerations come between any Democrat and his whole duty, but with serried front let us face the enemy until the Ides of November have come. And then when the battle is over we can go peacefully about our several avocations, for the friends of law will have prevailed, and we will have still another honest Democrat at the helm of State.

ACCIDENT.—On Friday Mr. T. J. Wrightson fell through an opening in the loft of the stable of Mr. F. G. Wright, which was covered with hay, and striking on a horse-power which was directly under the opening, broke his breast bone and two ribs, and cut his head quite severely. Dr. Anderson rendered medical aid, and he is now out of danger. Easton Journal.

IN AN INCREDIBLE short space of time NATURE'S HAIR RESTORATIVE has won its way into public favor. Why? Because it does the work, and leaves no ill effects. See advertisement

Letter from Federalsburg.

MR. EDITOR:—The nominees of Baltimore give general satisfaction so far as we have heard an expression of opinion. After all, perhaps, the result is fortunate, for notwithstanding the high character of Judge Carmichael, he has probably passed the period of life when his mind could be brought to acquiesce readily in the "logic of events" which have recently transpired. The reflections of the aged are upon the past and its associations, while the thoughts of the young are occupied with dreams of the Future, and it is only those who are in the meridian of life with physical and mental facilities in full vigor, who are really capable of grappling successfully with stirring events and mighty problems that are transpiring in the present. Let us then heartily acquiesce in the action of the Convention, resting assured that our standard bearers are men who understand "the ways of the hour," sufficiently prudent to avoid on the one hand the quicksand of radical theories and experiments, and too wise and practical on the other to retard the progress of the party, with the weight of the dead issues of the past.

A Sunday-School under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church has been recently organized in this village, with an able corps of teachers. Prominent among the officers are Messrs Wm. C. Logan and Jacob Rhodes. Quite a number of children enrolled themselves as pupils and the prospect is good for a large and efficient school and the early erection of a church of that denomination of christians. We were particularly impressed with one feature of the organization, namely the appointment of two standing Committees. The first is one of a missionary character, whose especial office it is to gather in from the high ways and hedges, the neglected ones with a view to their moral and and religious improvement. Alas! Mr. Editor; Is it not true that these are too much neglected by us all? "Many an ear both ripe and golden" is left by the careless "reapers" then let us "go and glean among the berries, growing rank against the wall, "For it may be that their shadows hide the heaviest wheat of all."

Besides, the master has bidden them as guests to his table and will be pleased to see them. Let us not forget these solemn words, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it not to me."

The second committee is charged with the duty of visiting all who are sick and in distress and ministering to their comfort and relief. In this connection allow us to inquire whether we shall be suspected of heresy if we express a doubt whether the true character and mission of Christ have been or are understood by any of us who have failed to show forth the spirit of the master in works of charity and good will to men. As we contemplate his unselfish character; his unceasing ministry to the multiplied fount of human suffering; his great heart which wept over and broke for sinful and fallen humanity on the one hand, the selfishness and vain-glorious display even of those among his professed disciples, who claim to have attained to a state of christian perfection, on the other, we are impressed with the belief that a sad mistake has been made by some of us.—"Verily the tree is known by its fruits.—"Do men gather thorns of grapes or figs of thistles."

We regard that as a spurious form of christianity which does not exhibit the power and spirit of its founder in deeds of practical kindness to his creatures for whom he died.

We observe by the report that the commissioners have appropriated twelve thousand dollars for the public schools of the county. While we have no hesitancy in saying that we wish the sum had been sixteen thousand, we are thankful to them for their liberality, under existing circumstances. The fundamental doctrine that it is the duty of the state to provide for the education of its citizens, that the influence of schools and institutions of learning are conservative of the peace and public morals in their tendency, will ere long be generally if not universally admitted. Economical considerations alone will persuade those who now dissent, of the fallacy of their reasoning. We regret however the wretched condition of the school houses, so called, in almost every portion of the county, and the utter inability of the school board under existing circumstances to remedy the evil.

Large shipments of peaches are being made at this station and at other points along the line, but they are not a tithe of what a few more years will bring when the large orchards now being planted come into bearing. Corn is looking remarkably well, there is a prospect of an abundant yield. What with strawberries, peaches, corn &c., the farmers hope to have their pockets better lined than for several years past. Hoping that a goodly show of it may reach us all, including yourself, we are,

Yours most truly D.

THE ALDINE.—This beautiful pictorial for August has just reached us, and still maintains its reputation as being the finest periodical published in America. At the commencement of the year it was scarcely thought possible that the publishers would be able to keep up the high standard with which they started, but the artistic world has been agreeably surprised as each successive number is fully equal—in illustration, typography and literary contents—if not superior, in many numbers, to those first issued. The one before us is extremely rich in illustration, containing no less than eight large wood-cuts, three of which are full-page ones. The principal, "Renard Outwitted," by Deiker; "Death of Wallenstein," by Billner; "The Picture-Gallery," by Becker; "Dogs attacking an Otter," by Beckmann; and "Othello and Desdemona," by Hoffman, are really beautiful, and are executed in that careful and delicate manner which is a specialty with this publication.—The literary matter is fully up to the standard, and of a varied and interesting nature. As each number is laid away, and the size of the volume, at the end of the year, becomes apparent, we begin to realize the handsome pictorial it will make, and to wonder, as, indeed, every subscriber must do, how it is possible for the publishers to issue such a work at $2 50 a year. The proprietors are James Sutton & Co., 23 Liberty Street, New York.

A newly-fledged Philadelphia doctor recently settled in Havana, Ill., and the first case he had was a boy, who while shelling pop-corn, got a kernel in his windpipe. The doctor examined the case carefully, looked at the patient's tongue, and then told the father of the boy to build up a hot fire. When that was done, the doctor told them to take the boy and hold him over the fire until the kernel got hot enough to "pop out." The old man went up stairs and got his shot gun, but while he was loading it the doctor made his escape.

WHO ARE TO BE VOTED FOR.—As some misapprehension exists in regard to the officers and positions to be filled in our State and County at the November election, we will state that a Governor, Attorney-General, Comptroller, three members of the House of Delegates, State's Attorney, three Judges of the Orphan's Court, three Commissioners, a Sheriff and County Surveyor are to be elected.

SPEECH OF THE HON. WILLIAM PINKNEY WHYTE.

Mr. President and Fellow-Citizens of the Convention:

In response to the invitation extended to me through your committee, I am here to accept, in person, your nomination as the candidate of the Democratic Conservative party for the office of Governor of Maryland.

In doing so, I am making no "new departure," but following the practice adopted by the eminent gentlemen, who, have in past times, received the same mark of distinguished consideration. Sensible of the high honor conferred by your selection of me from so many able and honored citizens of our State, I can scarcely trust myself to speak of the varied emotions of gratitude and self-distrust which fill my breast.

I can only tender to you, and through you to the gallant Democracy, my most grateful acknowledgements for this generous confidence. The general accord with which, I am informed, the nomination was made, adds immeasurably to the weight of obligation under which you have placed me. I accept this nomination as a servant of the people.

The highest duty of the citizen is, and his noblest ambition should be ,to take an active part in the work of government, and I cannot refuse to avail of the opportunity to render some service to my native State. I know that the steps taken to-day are tending not only to a path of honor, but of grave responsibility.

Should your nomination be confirmed by the suffrages of the people, I can only promise an earnest effort to discharge the duties of the Gubernatorial office with fidelity to the best interests of the people and for the promotion of sound republican principles.

I shall be the governor of the whole people.

Under the dominion of no faction or clique; interested personally in none of the great works of public improvement; wedded to no interest requiring special legislation; recognizing alike all honorable members of the Democratic Conservative party, there shall be "no power behind the throne greater than the throne itself."

Remembering the old landmarks of constitutional liberty which guided our fathers in the past, yet learning, in some measure, the lessons taught by the "logic of events," I shall try to act in the present in such manner as will benefit alike our own generation and promote the interest of our posterity.

Will it be presumption in me to borrow the language of Washington!

"I see my duty, and whatever difficulties and discouragements lie in my way, I dare not shrink from it, and I rely on that Being who has not left us to the choice of duties, that while I conscientiously discharge mine, I shall not finally loose my reward."

At a time like this and in such a presence, a general discussion of political subjects would be wholly out of place, but I beg to say that it will be alike my duty and pleasure to address the people of the State from time to time, prior to the election, on all the questions which now divide parties, and I shall endeavor to arouse them to a steadfast maintenance of those principles, which, to-day, in our State, secure to its citizens peace and prosperity at home and honor among our sister States throughout the Union.

Knowing that you have other obligations to discharge to your constituents and anticipating the pleasure of meeting all of you again during this canvass, I beg permission now to retire.

☞R. D. Munson is a persistent Yankee, a native of Willston, Vermont, who has devoted ten of his fourscore years to the achievement of making a clock that is more complicatedly ingenious than the Strasbourg timepiece, and vastly more serviceable. It runs eight days, and the dial marks the second, minute, hour, and day of the week, month and year; a thermometer rests against its pendulum, giving the state of temperature; the ball of the pendulum contains a miniature timepiece, which derives motive power solely from its vibrating position, and keeps accurate time; with this there is a delightful musical apparatus, which plays an air at the end of each hour, and it is piously precontrived so as to play only sacred tunes on Sunday, beginning and ending with the "Doxology." On National holidays the airs are diversified patriotically with "Yankee Doodle," etc. This wonderful timepiece presents a black walnut front ten feet high, twenty inches wide and ten deep, and is embellished with profuse scroll-work and National designs.

—A patron of a certain newspaper once said to the publisher:

"Mr. Printer, how is it you have never called on me for my pay for your paper?'

'Oh,' said the man of types, 'we never ask a gentleman for money.'

'Indeed.' asked the patron, 'how do you manage to get along when they don't pay you?'

'Why,' said the editor, 'after a certain time we conclude that he is no gentleman, and we ask him.'

'Oh—ah—yes—I see. Mr. Editor please give me a receipt,' and hands him a V. 'Make my name all right on your books.'

VERY COOL.—A splendid story is told of Marshal McMahon when a Colonel. During a parade he had an altercation with an officer in the ranks, who refused to obey him. McMahon finally threatened the offender, and the latter drawing a pistol, deliberately aimed and fired; fortunately the cap snapped.—Without the slightest sign of fear, cool and impassible, McMahon said: "Give that man fifteen days, calle police, for having his arms out of order."

A Sister-in-law of Mrs. Wharton, the alleged Baltimore poisoner, writes a private letter to a gentleman in Washington, in which she says that she knows Mrs. Wharton poisoned her (the writer's) husband and child four years ago. The letter is replete with all the bitterness of a woman who imagines herself to have suffered such terrible wrong from another.

Renomination of Col. Woolford.

The following is the correspondence between the Hon. Elias Griswold, Chairman of the Democratic and Conservative Convention of this State, and the Hon. Levin Woolford, in relation to the renomination of the latter to the office of Comptroller of the Treasury:

BALTIMORE, July 20, 1871.

Hon. Levin Woolford, Annapolis, Md:

DEAR SIR—The Democratic and Conservative State Convention, assembled in this city on the 19th instant, appointed a committee to wait upon the nominees and notify them of their nomination and request their presence in that body. Your absence prevented our seeing you and performing this gratifying office in person,

As Chairman of that Committee, I am instructed to notify you that you received the nomination for the office of Comptroller of the Treasury by acclamation.

For myself, personally, and the committee, allow me to congratulate you upon this renewal of the confidence of the people of the State in your eminent ability and fitness for the responsible and honorable place for which you have received a unanimous nomination.

Very respectfully and truly yours,

(Signed) ELIAS GRISWOLD, Chairman.

STATE OF MARYLAND, TREASURY DEPARTMENT, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, ANNAPOLIS, July 21, '71

Hon. Elias Griswold, Chairman &c.:

DEAR SIR—Yours of yesterday informing me of my unanimous nomination for the office of Comptroller of the Treasury by the State Convention of the Democratic Conservative party, is received.

I regret that my temporary absence from the hotel lost me the opportunity of returning my thanks to the Convention in person.

In cordially accepting this flattering nomination, allow me to say, sir, that I am proud that my administration of this office has been so emphatically endorsed by the people of the State and the great party to which I have always been attached.

A single term of two years is too short a time for any person entrusted with the duties of Comptroller to be of much permanent benefit to the State.

Coming into office during the session of the Legislature, as the Comptroller does, it is impossible that he can become sufficiently acquainted with the details of the office and the working of the revenue laws during the first two months of his official term, to be able to advise the Legislature effectively.

Hence the absolute necessity of continuing him in office, if you would have him capable of digesting and improving your revenue system.

I congratulate the convention, sir, upon the prosperous condition of the finances of the State, and the prospects that the burdens of taxation may be lightened by the next Legislatrue.

The credit of the State is at the highest point, and the close of the present year will probably witness a reduction of the State debt by nearly a million and a half dollars.

The revenue laws, however, need revision and amendment, and this subject is now receiving and will require from me a large amount of labor and deliberation.

The agricultural and producing interests of the State, groaning under the burdens of Radical legislation at Washington, especially require all the relief the State can possibly extend to them. This is the case throughout the country, and the fact is engaging the earnest attention of the masses.

Some of the manufacturing interests are even praying to be relieved from the effects of our excessive tariff; others will soon follow, no doubt, and all will eventually find out that a bloated condition of the Federal Treasury induces a corresponding leanness in the pockets of the people.

It is a subject of congratulation also that the end of the terrible misrule at Washington is becoming visible. The mutterings of discontent of an outraged people, like distant thunder, are being heard, and the shock of the approaching storm is already felt at the Federal capital.

The hatred of the Southern people, which has been the principal food and stock in trade of the Radical party, is rapidly waning, and it will require all the imagination of the most gifted Munchausens to keep up the story of Ku-Klux for six months longer.

The State of Pennsylvania, and the States of the Great West, are about wheeling into line, and the dead carcass of Radicalism will be a terror to the people of the country for an indefinite number of years.

Once in power again in the United States, the great Democratic and Conservative party will have nothing to do but maintain its ancient landmarks, adherence to the Constitution, an economical administration of the Government for the benefit of the whole people, protection to all and exclusive privileges to none, the liberty of the citizen and the rights of the people, to approve itself to the lasting confidence of the country.

Thanking the Convention for the high compliment conferred upon me by this unanimous reaffirmance of their confidence in again giving me the nomination, and the committee and yourself, Mr. Chairman for the very kind and flattering terms in which you are pleased to make the announcement.

I am, very respect'ly and truly yours

(Signed) LEVIN WOOLFORD.
