LONDON, April 11.

Expedition to the Continent.
It is reported that the principal command of the expedition, for the conveyance of which a considerable number of transports were taken up last week, is to be conferred on Lord Cathcart. It is to be composed of the whole of the German legion, at present near 18,000 strong, and a British force nearly as numerous. Should the events which in all probability have taken place before now in Poland, prove greatly in favor of the allies, the whole of this force is expected to make its appearance on the Baltic in a few weeks. Some accounts say, that beside the German legion, 80,000 men will be comprised in this expedition. Sir J. Stuart is said to have been offered the second command; but has declined any professional employment at present, on account of his health. The general sustained a blow by the fall of his horse, which was wounded under him on the memorable 4th of July, from the effect of which he is still a sufferer.

FEDERAL GAZETTE.

MONDAY, JUNE 1.

Ship Nancy, Lunaton, hence at Savannah.

It may not be improper to remark, that the arguments of counsel, on the motion to commit colonel Burr, were not heard by the grand jury: Nor is it to be supposed that any member of the grand jury will read such remarks previous to having found a bill—if they ever bring in a bill at all. Hence the apprehensions of the editor of the "Argus" (at Richmond) that jurors may be prejudiced in favor of the accused, are groundless. Certain editors felt no qualms of conscience, when, week after week, they labored, with no common industry, to "prejudice" every body against the accused.

If the editor of the Argus had not declared so loudly against those whom he rather peevishly declares "friendly to Burr," we had not cited this palpable difference between his professions and his practice. The Argus cannot fairly accuse "Federal Editors" of being "friendly to Burr." If Burr be guilty, they are fairly and on honorable ground hostile to him. At present, (and we hope always) they are "friendly" to justice and a fair trial, according to law; they never do attempt, as many democratic editors have done, to swell, by cruel and unwarrantable declamation, the strong tide of popular prejudice against any individual, who claims an impartial trial by the laws of his country. This, the editor of the Argus ought to know, is the good reason why "federal editors" have studiously avoided saying many things, which might honestly be told, concerning a great man, who will, perhaps, be tried after Burr.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas Elisha Rose, of Preston, in the county of New London, and state of Connecticut, charged with the murder, by poison, of John Herrington, Joseph Herrington, Philetus T. Herrington, and Clarissa Herrington, in four several indictments, depending before the honorable supreme court, in and for said county, hath absconded and avoids the ordinary process of law: Now, therefore, I, Jonathan Trumbull, governor in and over the state of Connecticut, in pursuance of a special resolve of the legislature, do hereby issue my proclamation, and offer Four Hundred Dollars, as a reward, to be paid from the treasury of this state, to such person or persons as shall apprehend the said Elisha Rose, and him deliver for trial, on said indictments, to the custody of the sheriff of said county, at the goal therein.

Given under my hand, at Hartford, this twentieth day of May, 1807.
JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the American Editors of Newspapers.

The culture of fruit trees being an important object in every part of the United States, and in many of the old towns the scarcity of timber and fuel pointing to the necessity of rearing forest trees, I have observed with regret in every part of the country a great error in regard to the raising of trees of every kind—that is, in permitting the grass to grow near the body of young trees. Even the hardest forest trees will not thrive well, unless the earth round them, at three or four feet, is kept loose and free from grass or weeds. For want of attention to this important circumstance, innumerable trees decay and die; and the growth of those which do not die is so slow, that the labor of the planter is nearly lost—as in that state it will require four times the number of years to rear them to maturity, that would be required if properly cultivated.

In planting trees, it is essential to their quick growth, that the holes be much larger than the extent of the roots—and that some rich earth be put into the holes. And let it be remembered, that the growth of trees may be increased by proper manure and culture, as much as other plants; and persons may ascertain this fact, by the attention to some trees, and neglect of others.

As the loss to the farmers is immense, in consequence of the error above mentioned, it is hoped that every printer may give these hints to his readers.

A NATIVE CITIZEN.

N. B. It is computed that forest trees, to the value of two millions of dollars, might be annually raised in the old towns of the United States, without lessening the growth of any other productions, and without great expense—as the ground might be kept in proper order by the plough, where the trees were planted in rows. Many of the pastures would be benefited by being surrounded with forests; and their shade is refreshing to cattle, sheep and horses, and to all animals.

Whoever notices the decrease of timber and fuel in the old towns, and the increase of inhabitants, must view this as a very important concern, and lament that it is so generally neglected. The naked lands of Europe, once covered with trees, where millions of people can now scarcely obtain fuel to cook their victuals, afford a lesson for the people of this country. But our own experience may teach us with still more effect; within twelve years wood has risen in price, in many towns, more than two hundred per cent. Surely then our domestic as well as political and moral concerns, require us to keep our eyes fixed on futurity. [Boston Chronicle.]

MEDICAL NOTICES.

The London Medical society proposes to confer the Fothergillian gold medal upon the authors of the best essays on the following subjects:

Questions for the year 1807.—The best account of the epidemic fevers which have prevailed at several times in North-America, Spain and Gibraltar, since the year 1798, and whether they are the same or different diseases?

For the year 1808.—What are the best methods of preventing and of curing epidemick dysentery?

For the year 1809.—What are the criteria by which epidemic disorders that are not infectious may be distinguished from those that are?

For the year 1810.—What are the qualities in the atmosphere most to be desired under the various circumstances of pulmonary consumptions?

It has been lately recommended, that excepting the lancet employed in vaccination all the instruments of surgery ought to be dipped into oil at the moment when they are going to be used; by which method the pain of the subject operated upon will always be diminished. It is recommended to make all instruments of a blood-heat a little before the operation.

PLYMOUTH, May 18.

The schr. Betsy, capt. Patsy, arrived here this day in 44 days from Malaga.—The American consul handed the following memorandum to captain P. just before he sailed.

By letters from Algiers, dated Feb. 22, we learn that the Dey has declared war against Tunis. Two Algerine frigates had sailed, and another was to follow in a few days, for the purpose as was supposed of blockading Tunis. A number of xebecs and gun-boats were getting ready, artillery shipping, and accommodations for troops preparing in the vessels, from which it was inferred that a very spirited attack on Tunis was intended.

The York Springs,

Having become a place of fashionable resort during the sultry months of summer, it is presumed that an account of their mineral & medicinal properties will not be unacceptable to such as are disposed to visit them the ensuing season. From a chemical analysis that has been made of these waters by re-agents, it is inferred that their active principles consist of a small portion of sulphate of magnesia or epsom salt, sulphur & iron in a state of the most complete solution, and a quantity of sulphurated hydrogen gas or hepatic air. Their effects on the human constitution correspond to the operation of those medicinal substances, when taken in moderate doses. They prove powerfully diuretic, mildly aperient, and gently promote perspiration. They appear calculated to discharge from the system the noxious bile, the principal cause of autumnal diseases, with the additional virtue of preserving and improving the tone of the stomach. To these advantageous effects, those can testify who have used them.

PROPOSALS,

By EZRA SARGEANT, No. 59, Wall-street, New-York.
For publishing by subscription,
A NEW CYCLOPEDIA, OR,
Dictionary of Arts & Sciences.

By G. GREGORY, D. D.,
Author of Essays Historical and Moral, the Economy of Nature, &c. &c.
To be completed in twelve months from the time it is put to press. In Twelve Parts. Price two dollars and seventy-five cents each.

The literary Quackery which prompts the publisher of every new work to endeavor to magnify the merits of his own intended publication by depreciating the merit of all other similar productions, is, at once, both useless and despicable; because nothing human can rise into esteem and honor, merely upon the ruins of another's reputation, without some intrinsic excellence of its own. The Publisher of Gregory's Cyclopaedia, therefore, will leave it to others to discover and declare, that the generality of Books called Encyclopaedias are, in their very constitution and form, too expensive and too cumbersome, to be either extensively circulated, or generally useful; and will content himself with briefly stating the claims and pretensions of the Book which he hereby proposes to offer to the public.

First, It comprises the most valuable information in all the important departments of Knowledge, collected and arranged by some of the best scholars, and the most comprehensively scientific men, this day existing in Britain.

Secondly, This information is comprised in a small compass, and conveyed in language at once perspicuous and elegant; so that the reader may, in a short space of time, with ease and pleasure to himself, obtain that real acquaintance with the moral, literary, political, and philosophical world, which otherwise could not be acquired from the larger works in which the sources of these streams of knowledge are contained, but by a whole life devoted to severe and unremitted labour.

In order to render the work worthy of the patronage of the American public, the Publisher has engaged all the best American Artists to engrave the Copper-Plates, of which 138 will be given in the course of the work; and has also secured the assistance of Editors of acknowledged talents and information. It is with the blended emotions of confidence and delight, that the Publisher announces his intention of offering to his numerous patrons and supporters, a work which combines elegance with economy, and practicable utility with splendor.

That the Editors and Subscribers of this intended Publication, may be thoroughly assured of not having their patronage and protection abused by any defect in the execution of the work itself, or any want of punctuality in its appearance, at the stated and appointed times, the page given as a specimen of the style in which the publisher solemnly pledges himself the whole shall be executed, may be seen at the office of the Federal Gazette.

On account of the great abundance of matter and the number of Engravings which the work will contain, and in consequence of the vast expense necessarily attending the prosecution of such a plan, the publisher is compelled to solicit the aid of a sufficient number of subscribers, to enable him to carry his purpose into full effect, before he puts any part of the intended Publication into the hands of the Engraver or the Printer.

The acknowledged and intrinsic merits of the work are such as to ensure it a very general and extensive circulation; wherefore it only remains to the Publisher to ensure to his subscribers that the whole of the execution, as to the accuracy and elegance of the engravings, paper, and type, shall be such, in every respect to correspond with the high value of the work. As to the engravings, as yet no specimen can be given; but the Publisher pledges himself that they shall be at least equal, and many superior to those in the London edition.

That there may be no possibility of disappointment to the patrons of literature as to this work, the subscriptions are proposed to be received on the following

CONDITIONS:

1st. The whole shall be comprised in Twelve parts, one of which shall be published monthly. Each part shall contain about 150 quarto pages, neatly done up in colored paper, at the price of Two Dollars and Seventy-five Cents, which is to be paid for on the delivery of each part—the whole twelve parts when completed will make two volumes in quarto, containing 238 Copper-Plate Engravings, which alone are worth the price of the whole work. It will contain more than double the matter of any similar work that has ever been published in this country.

2dly. One Dollar shall be paid at the time of subscribing, and to be deducted on the delivery of the twelfth part.

3dly. If the work be not executed in every respect equal to the engagement hereby made the subscribers shall, on returning the volumes, receive back the amount of their subscription money which has been advanced. If required, the publisher will give a Certificate, pledging himself to that effect, to each subscriber, at the time of subscribing.

4thly. The price of each part will be raised to Three Dollars, the moment that the work is put to press; and even then, the whole expense of a work which contains the substance of all that is known on every subject, literary and scientific, will be only 36 Dollars.
New-York, May, 1807.
June 1.
