Extract of a letter from John R. Livingston Esq. to his friend in Pittsfield dated.

RHINEBECK, Sept. 20th, 1807.

"I have sold all the wool of my Spanish sheep to Mr. Dando, a hater in New York, for 1 dollar 50 cents per lb. washed. My brother (Chanceur Livingston) sold his unwashed, to a Mr. Booth, a clothier near Poughkeepsie, for 1 dollar 25."

These facts are demonstration in point to establish the importance of the Merino Spanish sheep, and cannot fail to arouse the farmers to their true interest. The farmers of the country of Berkshire, in Massachusetts, are commencing this important enterprise, which will doubtless prove of more value to the country at large, than if they had sprung a mountain of gold.

CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

From our Correspondent.

Washington, November 30.

Proceedings this day.

Mr. Cook observed, that the house had been sometime in session, and had done nothing on the great national question for which they had assembled. Some were in want of the information necessary, and some perhaps of the disposition to act. For the purpose of gaining that information, he submitted the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, that the Secretary of the navy be directed to lay before this house, a statement of the number of frigates and other armed vessels composing the navy of the U. S. distinguishing those in actual service from those in ordinary and those in want of repairs, the sums necessary to put them in actual service, and the time necessary for making such repairs.

2. Resolved, that the Secretary of the navy be directed to lay before this house, a statement of the number of officers and men respectively, belonging to the navy of the States and of the marine corps.

3. Resolved, that the Secretary of the navy be directed to lay before this house, a statement of the number of officers and men which may be necessary to man the whole and entire fleet of the U. States, including gun-boats; and an estimate of the expense necessary to keep them in actual service during one year.

4. Resolved, that the Secretary of the navy be directed to lay before this house, a statement of the quantity, quality, and present state of the timber and other materials belonging to the U. States, now on hand, and the purposes for which such materials may be suited.

Mr. Smilie wished the gentleman to state the object of the resolutions; and whether the building of a fleet was to follow. A report was on the table, which was a part of the system of defence now in contemplation. He thought it best to do one thing at once: he therefore moved to postpone the further consideration of the resolutions until this day week.

Mr. Cook was surprised to find any objection to the resolutions. They merely went to request information necessary for the house to have. There was nothing in them about increasing or decreasing the navy. He thought he had slept long enough: He feared he might sleep the sleep of death.

Mr. Milner thought the motion of his colleague (Mr. Smilie) very extraordinary. Notwithstanding the gentleman's great antipathy to a navy, he was surprised that he should be unwilling to grant the house the information now required. Whether the navy was to be increased or annihilated, it was necessary for the house to possess the information requested in the resolutions. He believed there were not ten gentlemen on the floor who knew the present situation of our naval affairs, how many vessels were in actual service, how many were in ordinary, or how many were rotting.—It had been said on the last day the house were in session, that we were on the eve of a war; he believed one gentleman had said, that we were actually at war. In this situation, a gentleman comes forward and objects to the call for necessary information respecting the present state of our defence; and particularly when the winter was approaching, at which time the difficulty of repairing our vessels will be so greatly increased.

Mr. Mumford said the house had been a month in session, and had done nothing, although the nation was continually looking up to the house for something to be done. He hoped the house would immediately proceed to the defence of the nation. Look at the preparations in Canada and Nova Scotia, where troops have arrived, and others are expected. 20,000 men, too, were said to be destined for South America, when they might in fact be destined for the W. Indies; and fourteen sail of the line were said to be destined for the West Indies, when in fact they might be to blockade our own ports.

Mr. Dana said that the object of the resolutions was merely to gain official information; he thought them important, as our affairs were certainly in a very delicate situation. Some gentlemen had said that we were on the eve of a war; if so, we should surely know our means of defence. If it was improper in the house to know the means, it was improper in the president to commend the subject to their consideration.

Mr. Smilie said, that if the gentleman from New York (Mr. Mumford) supposed that he was opposed to putting the country in a state of defence, he was incorrect; he thought that in our present critical situation, we ought to proceed as if we were actually at war. But he did not think that fleets were the best mode of defence; he believed that our ports and harbors ought to be fortified.

Mr. Smilie's motion to postpone was lost.

Mr. Cook said he consented to withdraw the first resolution, at it appeared the house had received a letter from the secretary of the navy, giving the information required by it; but he hoped the house would adopt the others.

The question was then taken on the three remaining resolutions and they were agreed to.

Mr. Porter presented a petition from the copper-smiths of Philadelphia, praying that the petition of Paul Riviere and others, of Boston (praying that a duty may be imposed on imported copper) may not be granted, referred to the committee of commerce and manufactures.

The house went into committee of the whole on the second report in part of the committee of aggressions (published in the Federal Gazette of Tuesday last)

Mr. Bennett (of N. C.) moved to fill the blank in the first resolution appropriating a sum of money for the repair and erection of fortifications, with "750,000" dollars. Mr. Masters (N. J.) moved to fill it with "1,500,000." Mr. Gardiner (N. Y.) moved to fill it with "4,000,000." These several motions occasioned a debate of some length. They were afterwards withdrawn, and the resolution was agreed to by the house, without filling up the blank, in order that the blank might be filled in the bill to be brought in for the purpose. The second resolution (appropriating ————— dollars for the building of gun-boats) was also agreed to in the same manner, ayes 92. The committee of the whole then rose, and reported their agreement to the resolutions, in which the house concurred, and the resolutions were referred to the committee who reported them, for the purpose of bringing in a bill.

The house then adjourned (a little after three o'clock.)

COMMUNICATION.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Departed this life on Tuesday evening the 24th inst. at his late residence in Harford county, Mr. GEORGE GARRETTSON, aged 65 years, an eminent member of the Methodist Society for nearly thirty years. He has left an antient widow and many relations and friends to deplore his loss.

Newspaper panegyrick hath become so common, that those readers who had not the pleasure of Mr. Garrettson's acquaintance, and have not witnessed his remarkably kind hospitality, may suppose that what is here said of the deceased, merely follows as a matter of course.—But those who were acquainted with him, know him to be "an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile." The widow's and the orphan's friend, he always contributed his mite to the relief of the distressed. These good qualities he possessed in an eminent degree. He laboured with his own hands daily, until the middle of April last, when he was attacked with the palsy, which disease put a period to the existence of this excellent man. No doubt remains with the writer of this, but he has received the comfortable satisfaction of "well done thou good and faithful servant;" thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.—Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Such a charm is wealth to man, Many are his ways to seek it; Happy is he, if he can, Find away to get and keep it.

What a silly Fool was I, Now, I own it with a sigh, Pleasures lengthen'd, shorten treasure. When my little all seem'd gone, Still I thought to keep it up; Beauty shou'd me as a drone, And cold caution held the cup. As my wants increas'd my case, So increas'd my fortitude, Never should a man despair, Hope is all one earthly good. Tho' it be nearly all bereft, Something whisper'd, trust to Chance! And with little, little wit, Found enough for future wants. Chance has prov'd my greatest friend, All the Parasites are fled, Should they come for certain ends, They Ma' flatter I'll upbraid. But it's reprimand won't do, They may come to me to greet, Sirs! says I, I've done with you, Try your Chance in Market-street.
