POETRY.

From the New York Tribune.

BY A LADY OF VERMONT.

For my spirit free henceforth shall be A type for the sons of Liberty.

Through the vaulted dome of the azure sky; On a sunbeam bright take my airy flight,

Where Luxury reigns o'er voluptuous plains, And fetters the free-born soul in chains.

Then give to me in my flight to see

When slow expires in smouldering fires How Freedom's light rose clear and bright From fair Columbia's beacon hight, 'Till ye quenched the flame in a starless night.

Then will I tear from your pennon fair My olive-branch on the blast I'll launch, The fluttering stripes from the flag-staff wrench' And away I'll flee, for I scorn to see A craven race in the Land of the Free. Brandon, Vt., January, 1844.

The blossom which withered here upon its stalk has been transplanted there to a place of endurance, and it will then gladden the eye which now weeps out the agony of an affection that has been sorely wounded; and in the name of Him who if on earth would have wept along with them, do we bid all believers Mhere the wild winds rock my eaglets to rest; present to sorrow not even as others in the thought of that country where

"PRESS ON."

This is a speech brief, but full of inspiration, and opening the way to all vicwas this: under all difficulties and discouragements, "press on." It solves the problem of heroes—it is a rule by which to weigh rightly all wonderful success and triumphal marches of fortune and old and young, high and low, fortunate and unfortunate, so called.

"Press on!" Never despair, never be discouraged, however stormy the heavens, however dark the way, however great the difficulties and repeated the failures. "Press on!"

If fortune has played false with thee to-day, do thou play true for thyself tomorrow. If thy riches have taken wings and left thee, do not weep thy life away, but be up and doing, and retrieve the loss by new energy and loss. If any unfortunate bargain has deranged thy business, do not fold thy arms and give up all as lost, but stir thyself, and work the more vigorously. If those whom thou hast trusted have betrayed thee, do not be discouraged, do not idly weep, but "press on," find others, or what is better, learn to live within thyself. Let the foolishness of yesterday make thee wise to-day. If thy affections have been poured out as water in the desert, do not sit down and perish of thirst, but "press on;" a beautiful oasis is before thee, and thou mayest reach it if thou wilt. If another hath been false to thee, do not thou increase the evil by being false to thyself. Do not say the world hath lost all its poetry and Dr. Chalmers furnishes the following beauty; but even if it be so, make this
