

Claimant, Henrietta Frisby, lived together as husband and wife continuously to the day of his death, and were never separated or divorced.

I have lived in the same part of this City with them during all the times and seen them often.

If they had ever been separated or divorced, I would have known it.

Benjamin Frisby is dead, but I don't know when he died.

He never had any property of any kind and left none to his widow.

Henrietta Frisby is a very poor woman and is taken care of by her son Charles. She has not remarried, but is still the widow of Ben Frisby.

I have no interest in this claim for pension. You have read this deposition to me, I understand it and it is correct.
