POBTRY

From the Alexandria Gazette. "ARE WE ALMOST THERE" "Are we almost there—are we almost there" Said a dying girl, as she drew near home-"Are those our poplar trees which rear Their forms so high 'gainst the heavens' blue

Then she talked of her flowers, and thought of the white stone, was on!

While yet so young, and her bloom grew less, They had borne her away to a kindlier clime-For she would not tell that'twas only distress Which had gathered life's rose in its sweet spring

And she had looked, when they bade her to look, At many a ruin and many a shrine-At the sculptured niche, and the pictured nook,

And marked from high places the sun's decline, But in secret she sighed for a quiet spot, Where she oft had played in childhood's hour; Tho' shrub or floweret marked it not,

'Twas dearer to her than the gayest bower. And oft did she ask, "Are we almost there?" But her voice grew faint, and her flush'd check

And they strove to soothe her, with useless care, As her sighs would escape on the evening gale.

Then swiftly, more swiftly, they hurried her on, But anxious hearts felt a chill despair; For when the light of that eye was gone, And the quick pulse stopp'd, she was almost

THE VOICE OF SPRING. BY MRS. HEMANS. I come, I come, ye have called me long, I come o'er the mountains with light and song; Ye may trace my steps o'er the wakened earth, By the winds that tell of the violet's birth-By the primrose stars in the shadowy grass-By the green leaves opening as I pass.

I have breathed on the south, and the chestnut

By thousands have burst from the forest bowers; And the ancient graves and the fallen fanes Are veil'd with wreaths on Italian plains. But it is not for me, in my hour of the bloom, To speak of the ruin of the tomb.

I have pass'd o'er the hills of the stormy North, And the larch has hung all his tassels forth; The fisher is out on the sunny sea, And the reign deer bounds through the pasture free, And the pine has a fringe of softer green, And the moss looks bright where my steps have

I have sent through the wood-path a gentle sigh, And called out each voice of the deep blue sky; From the night bird's lay through the starry time, In the groves of the sweet Hesperian clime, To the swan's wild note, by the Iceland lakes, When the dark fir bough into verdure breaks.

They are sweeping on to the silvery main, They are flashing down from the mountains brows; They are flinging spray on the forest boughs; They are bursting forth from their starry caves; And the earth resounds with the joy of waves.

Come forth. O ye children of gladness, come; Where the violets lie may be now your home; Ye of the rose cheek and the dew bright eye, And the bounding footstep, to meet me fly. With the lyre and the wreath and the joyous lay, Come forth to the sunshine-I may not stay.

Away from the dwellings of care-worn men, The waters are sparkling in wood and glen; Away from the chambers and dusky hearth, The young leaves are dancing in breezy mirth; Their light stems thrill to the wild wood strains, And youth is abroad in my green domains.
