

POETRY.

From an Edinburgh Paper. THE GRAVE OF BURNS. Written in sight of the Monument Temple erected to the memory of the Bard of Dumfries.

Beyond little snowy dome The sacred shrine, the silent tomb, Where thinking strangers love to come— Where Genius mourns,— The last, the solitary home, Of these, poor Burns!

Yes, yes, that dome adorns thy bed; 'Tis given by those who scarcely bread, When living, gave thee a shed To hide thy care;

Remorse hath made them sign the deed, And seal't with tears. That little spot is thine, and who? Shall turn thee from thy tenure now? Thy term is long, thy Landlord true, Thy troubles cease!

The great posses no more than thou From Heaven's lease, Swan of the Nile! thy wing was light, Thy plumes were whiter of the white, But wild and wayward was thy flight From wave to wave;

One course was thine—headstrong and bright, Even to the Grave. Swan of the Nile! if aught in thee Was dark, no friendly eye should see, The world should warmly view like me Thy life's short dream;

And let thy faults as Swan's feet be, Sink in the stream. O. M. Burns was obliged to quit his farm from poverty. Swan's feet are said to be the only blessing of these birds.

From the London Court Magazine. SUMMER SONG, BY MRS. HEMANS. O! YE HOURS.

O! ye hours, ye sunny hours! Floating lightly by, Are you come with birds and flowers Odours and the blue sky?

Yes, we come, again we come, Through the wood paths free, Bringing many a wanderer home, With the bird and bee.

O! ye hours, ye sunny hours, Are ye wafting song? Doth wild music strain in showers All the grove among?

Yes, the nightingale in there, While the starlings chirp, Making young leaves and sweet air Tremble with their strains.

O! ye hours, ye sunny hours! In you silence flow, Ye are mighty powers! Bring me bliss or woe? Ask not this—ask not this!

Yield your hearts awhile To the soft wind's balmy kiss, And the heaven's bright smile. Throw no shades of anxious thought O'er the glowing forest!

We are come with sunshine fraught, Question not the hours!

INDUSTRY.—The late Rev. John Heckelder, of Bethlehem, was a worthy missionary to the Indians of Pennsylvania, during forty years. He published a history of their manners and customs, from which the following anecdote is extracted.

"Seating myself once upon a log by the side of an Indian, who was resting himself there, being at that time actively employed in felling in his cornfield, I observed to him that he must be very fond of working, as I never saw him idling away his time, as is so common with the Indians. The answer he returned made a very great impression on my mind. I have remembered it ever since, and I shall try to relate it as nearly in his own words as possible.

"My friend" said he, the fishes in the water and the birds in the air, and on the earth, have taught me to work. By their example I have been convinced of the necessity of labor and industry. When I was a young man I loitered about a good deal, doing nothing, just like the other Indians, who say that working is for whites, and negroes, and the Indians have been ordained for other purposes—to hunt the deer, and catch the beaver, otter, racoon, and such other animals. But it one day so happened, that while hunting, I came to the bank of the Susquehanna, and having set myself down near the water's edge to rest a little, and casting my eye on the water, I was forcibly struck when I observed with what industry the mackerel-gulls (ston fish) heaped small stones together, to make secure places for their spawn; and all this labor they did with their mouth and body, without hands!

" Astonished, as well as diverted, I lighted my pipe, sat awhile smoking and looking on, when presently a little bird not far from me raised a song, which enticed me to look that way. While I was trying to distinguish where the sonneter was, and catch it with my eyes, its mate, with as much grass as it could hold in its bill, passed close by me and flew into a bush, where I perceived them together, busily employed in building their nest, and singing as their work went on. I saw the birds in the air and fishes in the water working diligently and cheerfully, and all this without hands. I thought it was strange, and I became lost in wonder. I looked at myself, and saw two long arms, provided with hands and fingers, and with joints that might be opened and shut at pleasure. I could, when I pleased, take up any thing with these hands, hold it fast, or let it loose, and carry it along with me. When I walked, I observed moreover, that I had a stout body capable of bearing fatigue, and supported by two stout legs, with which I could climb to the top of the highest mountains, and descend at pleasure into the valleys.

"And it is possible, said I, that a being so wonderfully formed as I am, was created to live in idleness; while the birds which have no hands and nothing but their little bills to help them, work with cheerfulness, and without being told to do so? Has then the great Creator of man, and of all living creatures, given me all these limbs for no purpose? It cannot be. I will try to go to work. I did so, and went away from the village to a spot of good land, where I built a cabin, enclosed ground, sowed corn, and raised cattle. Ever since that time I have enjoyed a good appetite and sound sleep—while the others spend their nights in dancing, and suffering with hunger. I live in plenty. I keep horses, cows, and fowls. I am happy. See, my friend; the birds and fishes have brought me to reflection, and taught me to work!"

In our excursions through the country of late, we have noticed that the Partridge—the favorite game of the gunner—frequents the woods in greater numbers and makes his song heard more often than has been common for some time. It will be remembered that the severe winters of a few years past had almost banished him from his accustomed haunts; but now his loud whistling of "Bob White" shows that his health is renewed and his genius in a fair way of being perpetuated. It seems to us that birds of all kinds are in greater plenty this season than for several years past; whether this is occasioned by the appearance above ground of the seventeen years locusts, as has been suggested by some papers, we know not; but we are very certain that the groves of the country are more replete with the tunes of the feathered songsters than has been the case for many summers. There will be good sport for those who delight in the death of these innocent creatures of heaven—among whom we are proud not to be classed—in the ensuing season.—Columbia Spy.

There is an orange tree in Versailles which is still vigorous and flourishing, and is ascertained to be over 400 years old. It is called the Bourbon, and belonged to the constable of that name, in the beginning of the 16th century, and confiscated to the crown in 1522, when it was a ready 100 years old.

Honor.—A French officer quarrelling with a Swiss, reproached him with his country's vice of fighting on either side for money, "while we Frenchmen," said he, "fight for honor." "Yes, Sir," said the Swiss, "every one fights for that he most wants."

Cut and thrust.—Stevenson was rejected by one vote. "I censure him," said Clay, "for packing the committees of the House." "All!" exclaimed Mr. Tyler, of Virginia, "and who has packed the committees of the Senate?" Mr. Clay crept into a knot-hole for the truth was, that through his management, three of the most important committees of the Senate have together, but two republicans upon them.—Emp.

FOREIGN GOLD.—The following is the result of recent assays, made at the Mint of the United States, according to the standard of the new law. The pieces assayed, were, we presume, such as have been found in circulation, and are a little worn. The sovereigns of full weight as delivered from the mint, with a Mr. Ingham's talies, and we believe correctly of $4.87. It was upon such sovereigns that our calculation to-day was based—for of course when sovereigns are imported in large quantities, merchants and bankers will take care to get the $8 of full weight, as they are easily obtained. Result of recent assays of the Mint of the U. S. Guineas are worth $5.05 1/2. Sovereigns, 4.82 1/4. Doubloons, Spanish and Patriot, $15 1/4 1/2. 50. 20 francs pieces, $3.75.—Jof. Commerce.

Cutlers on the Mississippi.—The Randolph (Team) Register, of the 21st of June, says:—"This desolating pestilence still traverses the lower part of the Mississippi. Several boats have lately passed up from Orleans, having on board from 6 to 15 passengers. The Kentucky an passed up on last Tuesday, having buried 18, principally Dutch emigrants. The disease breaks out and confines itself most exclusively among crowded deck passengers, who neglect all necessary precautions of cleanliness, and against exposure to the burning sun and night air. Prudence, cleanliness, and air, form at this time a sufficient safeguard against its ravages."
