But let us see how reasonable this is. Money is got by labor: and man tends a dollar, he may be said to lend a as far as accertained: bushel of wheat, it that be the price of wheat as then, the dollar may be exchanged for a bushel of wheat, and as this may be put in the ground and produce more wheat, why should he not receive his dollar again with use? This is the real reason why it is absurd to regulat the interest of money by law, and make the same at all times and places, because bushel of wheat and a dollar, and every thing else may be more valuable, by being made earn more in the bands of the bor, ower at on time and place, than another -But the subject of interest, is not intended to be discusse

From hence it follows, that gold and silve are precious metals; a species of merchandize, like all other merchandize; that they ar valuable because they are obtained with labor because they answer a purpose which nothing else will; and that they are valuable in pro portion to the labor expended in obtaining them. Though gold and silver are at presen immensely useful to mankind, and even es sential, still it is by no means impossible, the such changes may take place, that somethin that we are now put to in obtaining these metals.
