When the law went into effect and the Tolchester company found out that it had to keep a record of all shipments and file a copy of the consignments! transported by it at the end of each month in the clerk's office of the several! counties on the shore, and when it! | tound out that it and its agents were | ; liable to fine and imprisonment if they | violated the law—then Capt. W. C. Elia- | M son, head of the Tolchester company, announced that he was "afraid" of that law and went to the Public Service Com- 1 mission asking for double rates so that he could afford to take the necessary care and precautions. It is expected that the other transportation companies doing business on the Shore will follow the lead of the Tolchester company and ask for higher rates. They have had representatives keeping | 200 an eve on the course of the case, and, doubtless, are ready to oct.

"MARYLAND, MY MARYLAND."

The month of May is lovely the world over, but especially lovely does it sometimes seem in an old Maryland town; those Eastern Shore towns, some of | which are as restful and beautiful as the | 20 tranquil rivers that encircle or flow by M hem. Towns whose inhabitants possess culture and social grace, inherited. with their classical libraries, ancient silver and old manor houses from by- ing and always right prices. gone generations.

Have you ever spent an unexpected day in such a town? Have you dined | W in an old inn with great square rooms? Rooms sweet with the scent of newly laid matting and where a cinnamon rose and clover pinks in a glass vase upon the table were as suggestive of delicate taste as were the well-chosen pictures upon the walls.

And if the inn was thus pleasing, how much more pleasing the homes bordering on broad, tree-shaded streets, with perhaps grassy lawns at their backs stretching down to the softly flowing river. Have you been privileged to wander like that pampered bird of nursery thyme, "up stairs and down stairs." in a house as beautiful as those Thames: a house of brick erected in 1730, whose ivy-grown walls are as! stanch as the day when they were erected and whose interior restoration and furnishing are in such perfect harmony with the home's Colonial period, that to drift from room to room was like wandering through a perfect dreamland of very long ago? And have you experienced the sense of artistic completeness when the mistress of the mansion trips lightly down the quaint old staircase, herself as fair a picture of slender, high-bred, dainty femininty as any artist could desire-from high-coiffured hair to high-heeled slippers. as pretty a vision of the youthful matron of 1730 as heart could wish? Then leaving columned verandas and terraced river gardens, have you peeped into a Colonial custom house, where bales of gold and English merchandise were once stored and where the kitchen I fireplace may well have roasted the proverbial ox for hungry English sailors? And thence have you motored to the college, founded in faraway days, named for the "Father of his Country" and of which that same Washington laid the cornerstone and served upon its earliest governing board? Have you looked out to the Chester river from the college campus and felt close to the early history of your beloved country, and realized that the nation's greatness has been ! builded upon foundations of educational

And then have you been invited to afternoontea in a scholar's home adjacent to the campus? Shady, tree-environed, with suggestion of violet leaves in the greenness underneath the trees, the scent of orange blossoms wafted through open windows and a hostess to welcome you whose buoyant charm was akin to the wild roses that adorned her afternoon tea table? Have you lingered in the mellow light of wax candles and the refreshing coolness of iced beverages until the impatient honk of a waiting motor demanded your departure from such Eden? And have you gone away half happy in the rural pictures of timothy and wheat bending to the wind and alf sad because a panting steamer lay beyond to bear you from such scenes? At last, borne westward toward the setting sun, have you looked back to a thought of King Arthur's dream of: 'The island-valley of Avilion;

Nor ever winds blow loudly; but it lies Deep-meadow'd, happy, fair with orch-And bowery hollows crown'd with sum-
