Section 24, Article 3 of the Constitution. I think I was chairman of that committee during all my time in the Senate. Davis, a very prominent man ever was the matter has disappeared and where. of that day, was Treasurer of the State when they got the money. They managed in some way by various tricks to get the money which belonged to the various counties, Calvert, St. Mary's and Charles, and quite a large amount subscribed by the citizens of the counties. It seems that Smoote had the books and had gotten a good deal of the money. So Suit, being a member of the Senate. got up a resolution, which you will find in the Journal of the House of 1876, to investigate the affairs of the road. From what Suit had to say Smoote was not a good divider. The committee got a list! of about 50 witnesses and our Sergeantat-Arms was Eugene Gooding. We gave him the authority to go down in the county and summon witnesses. Finally Suit demanded that Smoote should be summoned, who did not live in the State but in Washington. We sent the Sergeant-at-Arms to Washington to summon Smoote. He went to his house, inquired for him and met a colored girl at the door. She told him Mr. Smoote was at home, but had a very bad case of The Sergeant at-Arms came back and reported. He came to me and I told him that the best thing he could do was to mark the case that Smoote had the small-pox. He objected to making the return as I told him and begged off. In a few days I received a letter from Smoot, as chairman of the committee, that if the Senate would protect him he would come. I wrote him word that our Sergeant-at-Arms would meet him at the train and give him all the protection he wanted. We did not wonder at him wanting protection, for we knew Suit was a bad man to reckon with. So the money was gone and the road bed was thrown up but no railroad. I do not know what they have done since, but that matter was before the committee! every session I was there. The Treasurer was much alarmed, as he thought the State would bring action against him. which at one time seemed likely. The charter for the road, I think, was gotten for their services. There was a man who came from Virginia named Moffett, quite a large man loons that sold the ardent, and to pay to the State so much for every drink that the saloons or hotels sold. This fellow seemed to have plenty of money. I I don't think I ever heard a Senator say that he had said auything about the case. I happened to take the train, the old line which went to Annapolis Junction, to come home. The western train was delayed and we were walking about on the platform. Moffett was a very talkative man and began talking to me. He said he had been to Annapolis and had a good product by which Maryland; | | could receive a large revenue, as they | did in Virginia. He asked me where I lived, and I told him on the Eastern | | Shore. He wanted to know if I knew | many people at Annapolis, and I told him no. "Well," he said, "I have every assurance that the Senate will pass my bill. My attorney is the Senator from a great deal of authority in the Senate." I said nothing, but tried to be a good listener I did not doubt anything he said. Finally he had his list of Senators | AD who would support his bill. He was | | coming back the next week and the | matter would be put right through. The list that he gave was a constitutional majority of the Senate. So I came on home and went back on M Monday. After supper Col. Ford and I late at the same table, so lasked him to | come to my room that I had something to tell him. I said, "With this promise that you won't get mad, excited nor abuse the principal." I told him that this fellow had told me that the Senator from Anne Arundel was his attorney and that he told me the names of those who | would support his bell punch. The Colonel got furious and the only way I | could quiet him was to tell him to be quiet until we could see the Senator from Howard county, and let him act, then you act and I will be satisfied. The next morning we had a talk with him and he said, "I don't doubt that every word you say is true," and laughed at the idea that the Senator from Anne Arundel had 14 votes in the Senate. We went away but I could see the Colonel was not at all satisfied. He insisted that we should call on this Senator to know what he meant. We gave him to understand that he could have all the bell punch he wanted but it would be without us and that he need not count on us to do anything in the future for him. So bell punch Moffett came back the next week but did not tarry very long.
