WAITING ON THE CORNER!

By JOHN PHILIP ORTH.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) Miss Madge Seaforth was playing ders off into the air of "Yankee Doodle," there's going to be a jangle. And then you suddenly remember that you borrowed Bessie Walter's dream-book a day or two ago, and solemnly promised her that if the reading of it caused you to dream you 942.48 essary delay.

266.21; Well, Miss Madge had read the book tents had made her gasp and shiver. $100,259.84 She had dreamed of being chased by snakes, wolves, brigands and runaway

They had run her through swamps, thickets and meadows; they had run ——— her up hill and down; they ran her $100,259 84 | through streets and alleys.

At last, after the chase had continued for miles and the poor girl had just jumped a fence nine feet high without her French heels touch-Brought forward, $75,082 79 ing a splinter, she caught the lower 3,646.14 limb of a tree and clambered up to 900.00 safety. She went to the telephone to 2,500.00 relate the dream in full. Miss Madge 1,000.00 settled herself for a cozy chat when 200.51 the answer came back from the cen-1,298.00 tral office:

"Can't do it; the lines are crossed." "What's the matter with the line?" "It's never in order!" "And I wanted to talk to Wall |

"You man with the big bull voice, 4,267.37 shut up!"

Miss Madge found herself interest-157.33 ed. There was one firm, clear voice 10,610.75 that dominated the rest, though it was 67.30 lost in the shuffle now and then. The 2,643.36 girl caught these words:

"At least ten thousand. About two 309.50 o'clock. The corner of Willow and 5,353.04 Stark streets. Don't strike to kill, but to stun. Yes, two of them. Then upstairs and down the back way. 1,505.50 | Sure thing." What was the meaning of those words! Here was something different from a dream. It was a mystery. "I am going to be there and see it," she At 1:45 that afternoon an auto with tonneau was at the corner of Willow CREDITED WITH THE FOLLOWING ASSETS and Stark streets. Three men were From down Stark street came two

> A moment more and things began to happen. The three loungers attacked the two men with the bag. There were shouts and blows and scuffling. The chauffeur leaped to the walk and ran away. Miss Madge opened the door of the vehicle and stood screaming. She hardly realized

12 45 it when one of the men threw the bag at her feet. "Save it from the thugs if you can! And then the girl found herself at $106,104 55 the wheel and speeding away. Straight home, a mile away, and the bag was carried into the house. It was then that Miss Madge had a fit of hysteria. The evening papers had a sensation, and as Miss Madge read the scare-heads she was as white as a sheet.

"The boldest holdup for years!" "Planned by a handsome girl!" "She waits in an auto and drives off with the $8,000 that was to pay the hands in a factory!" "The robbers arrested, but they won't talk!" "Their victims seriously injured in their plucky fight!"

"Who is the handsome queen of the robber gang?"

No police and no reporters until Mr. Seaforth arrived home and tele-98 00 phoned them. A few explanations and 35 03 all was made clear. Nine detectives and 21 reporters called at the Seaforth residence for interviews. The factory men called. Strangers in the city called and said it was a bully thing to do. Seventeen photographers wanted sittings, and felt ill-used when they did not secure

Among the last callers was Stephen Adair, one of the robbers' victims. He it was who threw the bag into the auto and shouted to the girl to drive Rent.....$ 800 00 off, and he had been made a hero of.
